SUMMER PROBLEM: Despite continuous cleanup efforts, die-off of alewives in Lake Michigan plagues beach users in Twin Cities area nearly every summer. Dead fish here line water's edge at Benton Harbor's Jean Klock park. Dwight (Pete) Mitchell, Benton Harbor, director of public services said beach is cleaned seven days a week, primarily by lifeguards, who arrive before swimmers.

WASHING ASHORE: Small, silvery-colored alewives wash ashore at Jean Klock park, making beach cleanup an endless task. Dead fish and foul odor annoy bathers, but mysterious die-off of fish occurs each summer. Problem peaked in 1967, when millions of dead alewives curtailed beach outings. Alewife population reportedly has declined since introduction of coho and chinook salmon and lake trout which feed on the trash fish. (Staff photos)

Kissinger's Trash Tells No Secrets

Reporter Goes Rooting For Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is distressed that a reporter is rooting through his garbage in search of a story. Jay Gourley, a 27-year-old reporter for the National Enquirer, a weekly published in Lantana, Fla., collected five bags of trash from in front of Kissinger's Georgetown home early Tuesday and hauled it away to sift through the debris.

So far, the reporter said he has determined that someone in Kissinger's home uses patent medicine, smokes Marlboro cigarettes and occasionally throws away the morning paper unopened.

The reporter said he found no official documents in the trash but added, "We've run into a couple of interesting things so far. We don't often get Henry Kissinger's garbage. This is a real prize."

Kissinger and his wife Nancy had other ideas about the garbage grab.

"This has caused grave anguish to Mrs. Kissinger, and the secretary of state is really revolted by what he considers a violation of the privacy of his house," said a State Department spokesman.

"Frankly, I'm sure most members of the press would agree with this," the spokesman added.

Gourley said he found Kissinger's trash in bags lined up on the sidewalk in front of the secretary's home. "Fortunately, he uses the sturdy kind that don't open," Gourley said.

A Secret Service agent guarding the house shouted, "Hey, what are you doing?"

Gourley said he kept talking to the agent while he stashed the bags in the trunk of his car. "I knew once I got them into the car there was no way they could get them away from me," Gourley said.

He was quickly surrounded by Secret Service agents and metropolitan police who deliberated for 2½ hours whether he could keep the trash.

"It got kind of funny," Gourley said. "Some of them were pretty upset but they weren't rude and they kept telling me I wasn't under arrest."

Gourley left with Kissinger's garbage after Secret Service agents determined that once trash is placed beyond a man's home, it legally is no longer his property.

E.G. Martin, assistant editor of the National Enquirer, said the garbage assignment was "following in the giant footsteps of Jack Anderson," a syndicated columnist.

Anderson sent some of his staff in 1971 to then-FBI Director

J. Edgar Hoover's home to go through his trash. Anderson said the assignment showed that Hoover brushed his teeth with Ultra Brite toothpaste, drank Jack Daniels whiskey and Irish Mist liquor and took antiacid pills.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — After tears, long arguments and pleas for brotherhood, a national Lutheran convention neared a crucial decision today on whether to force dissenting district leaders to get in line or get out.

The action, if taken, was seen as sparking potential rebellion, but it was pressed as essential to order by the conservative-backed administration of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, embroiled in conflict with a minority but sizable wing of moderates.

The proposed measure would order district presidents, equivalent to local bishops and often called that, to stop installing graduates of a breakaway seminary in local pulpits or else face expulsion.

The exiled seminary stems from a 1974 student-faculty walkout from the church's official St. Louis seminary in resistance to administrative pressures to impose a uniform, literalistic interpretation of the Bible. More than 200 graduates have since been turned out by the unofficial seminary.

"Our duty requires that the services of these young men be used," said the Rev. Emil Jaech of Portland, Ore., president of the Northwest District and one of the eight openly accepting the new ministers.

Altogether, nearly half of the church's 38 districts have accepted graduates of the rebel seminary in their ministry, although only eight have openly declared it.

"Far from being rebels, we have acted out of loyalty to the church and God's ministry," said the Rev. Dr. Rudolph Rasmeyer of New York City, head of the Atlantic District.

The issue was debated sharply and emotionally for two hours Tuesday by representatives of the 2.8 million-member church, second largest of three major Lutheran bodies in the country.

At one point, the church president, the Rev. Dr. J.A.O. Preus, turned to district leaders seated beside the podium and offered to recommend squelching the measure if they would halt their practice.

Senate Turns Down Campus Booze, Wine

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Senate has overwhelmingly defeated a bill which would have allowed state colleges and universities to serve beer and wine on campus.

Moments later, the Senate voted to ease the method by which local governments can legalize the sale of liquor by the glass in their communities.

The chamber voted 24-8 Tuesday against the bill to provide beer and wine at state colleges. The measure was kept on tap on the Senate calendar to enable the bill's sponsor, Sen. Gilbert Bursley, to work out amendments to make it more palatable.

The bill would have allowed each college to receive one license to sell beer and wine for consumption on the premises. It would apply to both universities and community colleges. Hard liquor would not be allowed.

Profits from the sales would have gone for scholarships and low-interest loans for students.

Bursley pointed out that students are legally adults and may purchase liquor of all types. He added clubs are maintained at many colleges to serve liquor to faculty.

Woman's Slayer Named, Detective Testifies

By SCOTT WILLIAMSON
Staff Writer

A state police detective testified Tuesday in an alleged insurance scheme murder trial that defendant Lorenzo Cross told him Terry Young Langford was the killer of Audrey Bridgewater Walker.

On the first day of the trial in Berrien Circuit court, Langford had repudiated his own testimony during preliminary examination that he had killed Mrs. Walker in a conspiracy with Cross to collect insurance policies.

The testimony of Det. Sgt. John Karson came near the end of the fifth day of trial for Cross, 25, of 1010 Union street, Benton township. Cross is accused of the murder of Mrs. Walker and conspiring with Langford to commit the murder.

Mrs. Walker's shotgun-riddled body was found Feb. 19 in a ditch off York avenue in Sedan township. Witnesses have testified Mrs. Walker purchased three triple indemnity insurance policies from Cross while Cross was employed by Western & Southern Life Insurance Co.

Karson, one of the detectives who worked on the case, testified he interviewed Cross twice on Feb. 28, four days after Langford had been arrested on a murder charge. Cross, however, was not arrested on the murder and conspiracy to murder charges until March 6.

Karson testified that during the interview Cross "said Terry told him he'd (Langford had) killed that bitch."

The detective also said Cross related a conversation between Cross and Langford in which Langford told Cross his (Cross) "father almost screwed the deal up because he told Audrey that Terry was going to kill her."

Karson stated Cross told him Langford wanted to get a gun from another Benton Harbor man because Langford was "going to kill Audrey Bridgewater."

Cross told Langford "the police would pinpoint him right away," but Langford said he "could get away with it."

Karson testified of his conver-

A Little Silver Emerging From Malpractice Cloud

Although rocketing malpractice suits and verdicts, accompanied by astronomical jumps in malpractice insurance premiums, remain the greatest immediate threat to health care service, a few signs indicate the danger has crested, that even some gains may derive from the crisis.

The American Medical Association recently earmarked a sizeable portion of its dues increase from $110 to $250 for expansion in continuing education programs and services to doctors.

The Illinois State Medical Society lent vigorous support to a legislative bill creating a medical disciplinary board. The board has subpoena powers and the authority to revoke or suspend licenses.

More controversial is the federal government's PSRO (Professional Standards Review Organization) as an adjunct to the medicare and medicaid programs. The medics have until next January 1st the option to set up the PSRO in 203 districts throughout the U.S.; otherwise, HEW which dispenses the funds, will take over that function.

There are manifold objections to PSRO. Their extensive geographical areas dilute local control. Like any other governmental system the bureaucratic finger sticks into the pie. Washington's insistence upon their creation implies a lack of trust in the medical profession.

Overextensive as may be PSRO, the fact remains that medicare and medicaid have cost the taxpayer a bundle and their quality of care is open to question. PSRO may not be the best surgical approach, but some step has long overdue; and, if nothing else, the profession is given the first chance to contribute toward a correction.

Farther down the road are some intangible factors on both sides of the malpractice fence whose dilution would do more than anything else to remove today's barrier separating physician and patient.

First the movies and later television have portrayed the doctor as the ultimate in professional skill. The physicians have not discouraged the imagery called up by a Dr. Kildare or a Dr. Marcus Welby.

The public has come to expect a guaranteed success in all treatment and when something goes wrong, even the courts have responded to that overreaction by applying unduly restrictive standards upon the profession. More realism from both sides is needed badly.

The action taken by the Illinois Medical Society gets around to the second part in this intangible equation.

All groups, whatever their calling, are overly endowed with the herd instinct. An accusing hand pointed at one member causes the others to shield him from inquiry, without regard to the merits of the complaint.

This standing together can be admirable in most situations, but it is unrealistic to sweep the dust under the rug in all of them.

Removing the rotten apple from the barrel or a diseased limb from a tree is absolutely basic to saving what is sound.

For years the lawyers fiddled around with the question of the unethical practitioner almost to the point of convincing the public that none of them could be trusted. At long last and still more hesitant than necessary their ethics committees are beginning to prune their professional tree.

The doctors do not face this particular credibility problem, but they suffer through absurdly high insurance premiums when a jury latches on to a finger chopper.

Enlightened self interest presents the obvious cure.

Tax Rebates Are Example Of Political Shell Game

Inflation might be better understood if it were referred to as a tax — a tax which is hidden many ways, but a tax nonetheless. If the inflation rate for 1975 should turn out to be 8 percent, and it could be higher, the person with an income of $10,000 will have his income taxed by inflation to the extent of $800.

By any standards that ranks as a heavy tax. It means workers have to run 8 percent faster, in terms of income, just to stand still. Many millions of workers and retirees are not able to run that fast.

In their cases inflation means a lower standard of living. That is another way of measuring the inflation tax. Understanding the undermining influence of inflation makes it easier to understand what Sen. Bill Brock of Tennessee had to say about inflation to the Taft Institute for Political Science.

The tax rebate of up to $200 received by American families this year, the senator said, could cost those same families between $120 and $160 a year for the rest of their lives. Brock was referring to the huge federal deficit which has been amassed in the last few years, to the extent that the interest alone on the national debt next year will be about $40 billion.

That interest has to be paid year after year and on an ascending scale, until the nation decides to lighten its belt sufficiently not only to eliminate further deficits but begin paying back monies borrowed earlier.

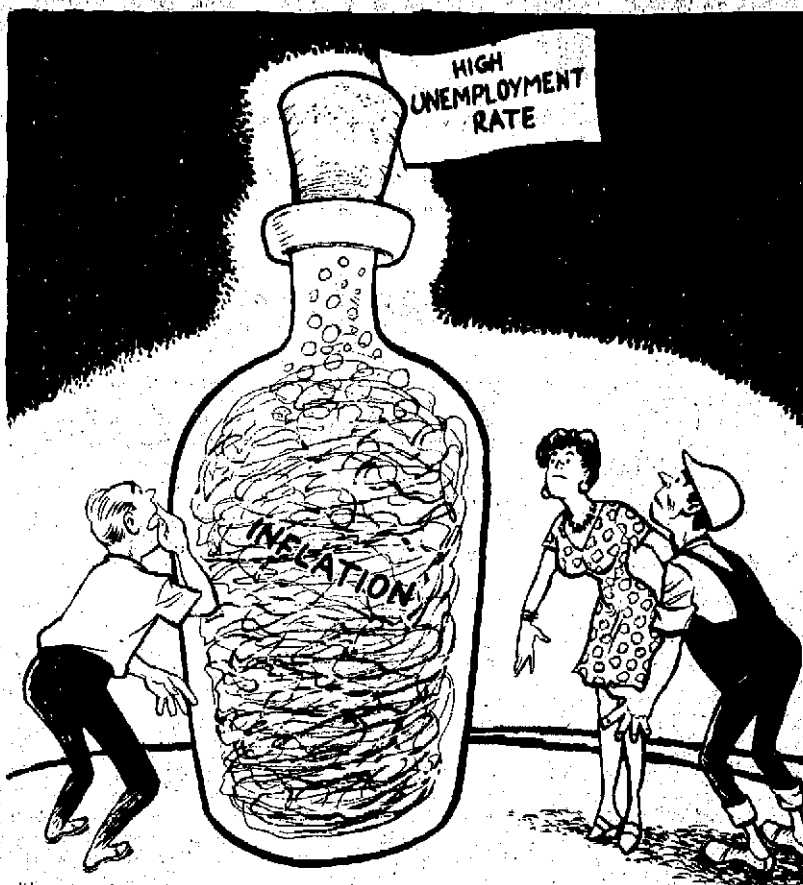

Sen. Brock summed up this year's tax rebates — popular though they were — this way: "I think the Congress decided they had themselves one honey of a political device — cut taxes and raise spending — and everybody would love them."

Until next year's inflation tax is presented for payment.

Don Quixote Would Be Sad

Only 15,000 windmills are still in action on America's farms and ranches. Of the nation's 175,000 windmills still standing, 70,000 could be put into working order and save a lot of electricity.

'BEN ROSENBERG PARK' SUGGESTED

The Berrien county Parks and Recreation Commission is working hard to develop the planned nature center near Berrien Center. This is to be located on county owned property near the Berrien county General Hospital and the juvenile home. This area is centrally located in the county and would also serve some of the patients at the hospital as well as helping to rehabilitate some of our juvenile offenders. Our county officials are to be praised for their efforts to provide our citizens with nearby facilities of this type.

I have enclosed an article which appeared in the South Bend Tribune on June 15, 1975. At the June 10, 1975 meeting of the Parks and Recreation Commission a motion was made to name the new park the Rosenberg Nature Center out of respect to Ben Rosenberg who has fought for use of the land as a park for many years.

It would seem only fitting that the park be named for someone who has fought a long uphill battle to establish a central facility that everyone may enjoy.

Other names that have been mentioned are Love Creek Nature Center and Berrien county Nature Center. Mr. Love was an early day settler in the area and operated a saw mill. Mr. Berrien was a young attorney general during the administration of President Andrew Jackson. It is doubtful that either of these men had much influence on the creation of this park.

It seems that too often we give roses to those who no longer can smell the sweet fragrance. There are only a couple of deserving individuals who have received the roses while they could yet enjoy them. Those I recall are Ardale Ferguson — Tourist Information Center, Donald C. Cook — Nuclear Power Plant, and Gerald Ford — Expressway.

Of course, you may have guessed by now that Mr. Rosenberg and I have been close friends for some years. During the time Mr. Rosenberg served as Supervisor of Sodus Township, it was my privilege to also serve on the Township Board of Trustees. I also know that Ben Rosenberg has helped many others who live far beyond the borders of Sodus Township. Look about you and you may see the handiwork of Ben Rosenberg.

Ben has always had a keen interest in people. His untiring efforts to establish a park that old and young alike may enjoy is just another example of his love for humanity. I for one, hope these efforts will not be unrecruited. Let's show him we really appreciate his efforts.

Let's hear it for Ben!

A ticket, which was 33 years old on last June 3, was honored at the Whitcomb hotel bath house department in St. Joseph Friday, according to Mrs. Helen Mattingly, the bath house manager. The ticket was dated June 3, 1917. Walter Sauerhies, veteran masseur at the local bath house, stated that hundreds of Chicagoans came to St. Joseph in those days and purchased books of tickets. He recalls the days when the famed Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley, and many other civic and political leaders from all sections of the country came to St. Joseph for the mineral baths.

Have Yet To Meet America

FORT INDIANTOWN GAP, PA. — The crowds of curious are gone now.

The Important People who were in attendance early on have since left for other pursuits. Now comes reality to this Vietnamese refugee camp, and with it almost loneliness. Only the homeless are still here, waiting, their faces pressed against America's windowglass, hoping someone will come to take them away.

Two months after the fall of Indochina, there is as yet no assurance the refugees will soon be taken away. Not all of them anyway. Though positive success has been made in relocating some 45,000 of the war immigrants, sponsorship applications have dwindled as the refugees have become yesterday's news. Ninety thousand orientals are still locked into depots throughout the nation, 14,000 of them here. There is no panic yet, nor should there be, but some are beginning to feel a sense of early desperation.

"I am a proud man," says a former Vietnamese naval captain, "but I would do anything to get out of here. There is an official named Greely — spelled with two L's — he works for the U.S. government. Do you know him? Have you heard of him? He is my friend. We worked together in Saigon. Will you tell him I'm here, with my family? Maybe he can help us. Will you tell him?"

In the captain's case, the seclusion and lack of information is merely a rub. He has been in America previously, and his concern for his fate is more frustration than anxiety. Yet, he says, some of the less worldly refugees are developing genuine fears.

Will they be sold into bondage? Will they starve if they can't find work? Will they be thrown into prison if they cannot speak English? The captain says adult men weep in the night with anxiety. Buddhists are converting to Christianity in hopes of appealing more to U.S. interests, and mothers tell their children grab the leg of any visitor so the family will be recognized as loving and adoptable.

When asked about the availability of recreation for refugees official says coldly that "you can't worry about that with all these bodies to process — what do you want, softball?" Softball, in fact, would be nice, and TV, and movies, and Kool Aid and Milky Ways. What the refugees need, almost as much as new homes, are things American. Many of them do not know how to operate flush toilets, the majority have never experienced air conditioning, almost none have stood at the checkout counter in a Safeway.

Processing efficiency has its place, but what is lacking here is orientation. Why should a man wait to arrive in Oklahoma to learn that he needs no visa to get there? Waiting is bad enough without doing it in the dark. In this nation we wash our clothes in machines, not rivers, and that's important information for a mother of eight.

And so it goes here. Fix the papers but nothing else. What a waste. There is a woman in camp who has heard of the Indians and asks about them in low whispers. One supposes she will worry about her hair until such time as her sponsor is found, if ever, until she is finally resettled.

And until she learns one distant day that as a point of historic accuracy it was the white man of America who did the real scalping.

Bad Days Due For Ohioans?

WASHINGTON — The last remaining bona fide terrible old man in the House of Representatives is saying privately now that he will quit after one more term to run for governor of Ohio.

Rep. Wayne Hays is the only one of the aged Democratic Congressional dictators of this era who is not only as nasty as ever but has not been deposed by his juniors, his enemies, drink or ineptitude.

By virtue of his 14 consecutive House terms, he has become chairman of its Administration committee, chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee (a position he refused to relinquish earlier this year despite a plea from Speaker Carl Albert), and third-ranking majority member of the Foreign Affairs committee.

Hays is currently amusing himself by feuding with House Majority Leader Tip O'Neill, who as the second-ranking Democrat expects to succeed Albert if and when Albert steps down at the end of this term. Hays blames O'Neill for assisting a Democratic caucus move to oust him from his chairmanship — a move he narrowly averted by making a secret deal with the caucus chairman, Phillip Burton.

The deal preserved Hays' power, while three other equally unloved chairmen were enthusiastically defeated. In return (on Capitol Hill, there's always a return), Hays reportedly agreed to help Burton defeat O'Neill in the pending contest for Speaker.

But Hays knows that the reform sharks are circling and coming ever closer. So, at 64, he is preparing to move on to another fiefdom — the state of Ohio. Republican Gov. James Rhodes' term will be up in 1978.

"Hold on to your hats," he chuckles to acquaintances. "I'll only serve one term and I'll turn the state upside down."

Nobody has ever said that Hays was dumb. It's mostly that he is so obnoxious about things. Instead of spending a few minutes giving swell-sounding but hypocritical answers to the questionnaires put out by Ralph Nader's Congressional study team, Hays simply ordered the Nader bunch out of his office.

As boss of the Administration Committee, Hays has almost total control over every dollar spent in the House, and is therefore the chief dispenser of privileges and prerogatives to members. It tends to give him influence over his colleagues, who will sell out for a parking place faster than for cash in little white envelopes.

But his abrasive nature and devotion to the preservation of a system no longer functioning in the best interests of the House have made him something of a relic. And that's why Congress' gain in three years may be Ohio's loss.

Ex-Aide Says He Got Rent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Joseph Bastien says that while he was an aide to former Sen. Edward J. Gurney he accepted apartment rent and furniture from Florida builders and expense money from fund-raiser Larry Williams.

"The only time the expense payments ran on a businesslike nature was the one year Larry Williams was paying my money back. When it shifted to Washington, there would be big delays," Bastien testified Tuesday.

Bastien, 33, of Winter Park, Fla., admitted accepting $100-a-month apartment rent in 1971 from an Orlando builder, but he denied it was for any federal housing favors.

Bastien, Gurney and Federal Housing Administration officers K. Wayne Swiger and Ralph Koontz are charged with conspiracy to raise an illegal $233,000 slush fund from builders by peddling the former Republican senator's influence with the FHLA.

Fifty-Cent Buy Makes Their Vacation 'Super'

By STEVE SAGER
Staff Writer

It's been a "super" vacation for Arthur Hettig, 47, of 1060 Wedgewood road, St. Joseph township.

What made it so nice was a 50-cent purchase. Hettig, his wife, Betty, and their daughter, Lisa, 10, returned home last Friday from a vacation in Cincinnati to find he was the holder of a winning state lottery ticket that guarantees him at least $10,000 and makes him eligible for $200,000.

The ticket put him in the "super" drawing to be held in Detroit the last week in July or the first week in August.

"When we got home Friday my wife checked the newspaper because she had a ticket. I then remembered I had a couple of tickets, checked and found out I had two winning numbers on the same ticket," Hettig explained.

Hettig said he usually buys his tickets at Lambrecht's Package Liquor store, or Chickhaven Restaurant & Lounge, and occasionally at the Pine Pub. The winning ticket was purchased at the Pine Pub a couple of weeks ago. His two winning numbers were drawn last Thursday.

Winning the lottery is nothing new to the Hettigs as both he and his wife have each won $25 on different occasions. Their success may be attributed to a "double teaming" effort as both consistently buy lottery tickets.

Hettig said if he wins $10,000 it will go for "odds and ends I have to take care of."

What if he hits the jackpot? "I'll pay off the house and get a new car — to start with," he said.

Hettig said he will be one of either five or six others in the "super" drawing depending on the number of tickets sold.

Hettig is on his second week of vacation from his job as a lab technician at Whirlpool Corp., St. Joseph division, where he has been employed for 27 years.

HAPPY HETTIGS: Mrs. Betty Hettig and daughter, Lisa, 10, join Arthur Hettig in holding state lottery ticket that is assured of winning $10,000 and is eligible for up to $200,000. (Staff photo)

Lincoln Approves Tax Exemption Bid

By ALAN AREND
Staff Writer

Lincoln township board last night approved an application from Advanced Products company for an industrial facilities exemption certificate, under a new state law which provides for a property tax exemption for industrial expansion or rehabilitation.

The board's action followed a public hearing on the request just prior to last night's meeting, in which no objections were voiced.

If the request is approved at the state level, the firm will be taxed one-half the normal rate for the next 12 years for its recently constructed new facility off Marquette Woods road. The firm was the first one in the township to apply for the tax exemption certificate.

Purpose of the new state program is to create more jobs by allowing tax incentives to industry, according to Chuck Schrenk, director of Berrien county economic development.

In other areas, Wayne Hatfield of Wayne C. Hatfield & Associates, Benton Harbor architects, presented the board with a preliminary floor plan and sketch for the new township municipal building, to be constructed behind the township library off Roosevelt road.

Hatfield's preliminary plan called for a one-story building, containing 5,687 square feet, which he estimated would cost approximately $246,000, without equipment.

The board upon recommendation of its planning commission entered into agreement with the Berrien county planning commission for assistance in finishing up a new township zoning ordinance and future land use plan.

The board approved granting a variance in the township's subdivision control ordinance to Morris Rushell, owner of Birchwood Manor, who desires the area be classified as a recorded subdivision. Under the ordinance, in order for an area to be classified as a subdivision it must have public water, which Birchwood Manor does not. The variance was granted since the area was developed before the ordinance went into effect.

The board recommended to the State Liquor commission, that McGrath's restaurant-bar, 4272 Red Arrow highway, be granted an inside dance permit in conjunction with the establishment's liquor license. The request was made by Thomas McGrath, owner.

Upon recommendation of Trustee John Florian Jr., the board instructed its parks commission to set up a reservation schedule for use of the township's tennis courts off Roosevelt road.

The next regular meeting of the board will be Tuesday, Aug. 12, at 8 p.m., in the township hall, Stevensville.

School Chief Resigns At Port Huron

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — Port Huron School Superintendent Robert Coulter has resigned, effective Aug. 31.

Coulter's resignation came at the request of the school board which complained of what it saw as fiscal irresponsibility, citing a $617,000 over expenditure in the school budget.

Coulter had served as Port Huron school chief since 1969.

PARK PATHFINDER: Steve Pitts (center) won his Eagle scout badge by developing nature trails in Lincoln township park on Notre Dame road. Mrs. Patricia A. Rowe, member of the township parks commission, and Ronald Schultz, helped young Pitts in laying out trails in the 34.5-acre park.

Lakeshore Scout Earns Badge With Lincoln Trails

Steve Pitts was determined to get an Eagle Scout badge and as a result Lincoln township got a system of trails for its park off Notre Dame road.

Steve is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Pitts, 5524 Sioux court, Stevensville, and a member of Troop 607 at E. P. Clarke school, St. Joseph.

The Eagle award is the highest honor a scout can achieve by himself. So Steve, a junior at Lakeshore high school, looked for a service project that would help him cinch the award.

He approached Ron W. Schultz, Lincoln township park director, and the township parks commission on what he could do in the park.

Schultz consulted Charles Nelson, naturalist at Sarrett Nature center, and the two agreed the Lincoln township park presents an ideal situation for nature interpretation vs. the more conventional activities of ball diamonds, or camping.

Schultz said the high water table limits its use but provides ideal habitat for wild life.

The park is narrow — 528 feet wide — and 2,934.5 feet long from Notre Dame road to Lake Michigan. It contains 34.5 acres.

Developing nature trails was a challenge for young Steve, 16, who had to do considerable research so that his routes would cover the various attractions yet not damage the ecology.

The park ranges from dry forest to a marsh. There is a pond in the park, sand dunes and a lot of wild life. It is part of the Grand Mere area and a favorite spot for bird watchers.

Pitts carried wood chips the past two summers to build the trails. Logs originally were put down to outline the trails but picknicker carted away the wood for camp fires as fast as Pitts would install them.

Trails were too narrow to use wheeled carts to bring in the chips so Pitts had to shoulder pack them in. As the trails developed he got assistance from many Lincoln township residents.

This summer a group of young people in the federally-funded summer employment program are working on the beach and the trails, cleaning up and maintaining the park.

Future plans for the park include raised walkways over the marsh areas and construction of a bird observation tower.

Members of the Lincoln township parks commission have been pleasantly surprised at the development of the trails, their use and the interest in the park development. The commission members, Jeffrey W. Fox, Diane Knickerbocker, Donald Mack, Donald B. Myers, David R. Ohman and Patricia A. Roe, are convinced the park will become a unique workshop for residents.

PARK OF CONTRASTS: Lincoln township park is not quite 35 acres but contains many natural contrasts. Mrs. Rowe, Steve Pitts and Ronald Schultz walk trail that overlooks marsh.

Tax Favoritism Charges Leveled

By MIKE WYNGARDEN
Staff Writer

The "Clean Slate" group of Benton Harbor candidates, which includes Mayor Charles Joseph, leveled charges today that some city employees have "enjoyed exclusive tax reductions during the past year."

The group charged that City Manager Charles Morrison, Deputy City Manager Melvin Farmer, Public Services Director Dwight (Pete) Mitchell, former City Attorney Carl Cooper and former City Attorney Samuel Henderson "enjoyed a silent rollback of their property taxes."

The Clean Slate group running for city commission seats in the upcoming city election are Joseph, Barbara Huckaby, Commissioner Alfred Williams, Helen Ford, Charles Shepherd and Elias McGrew.

The group cited a report prepared by the "Tax Commission" which they said revealed that "city employees property taxes have been reduced while taxes on homes in the same neighborhood have remained the same, or been increased."

The charges were released today just prior to a special meeting of city commissioners called to determine if they would ask City Manager Morrison to remain or to continue with his resignation.

Morrison resigned June 9 after a commission vote of confidence failed in a tie vote. The vote of confidence had been called for by commissioners after Mayor Charles Joseph charged Morrison with "irresponsible action" and called for the termination of his contract.

Charges were made in a release by the Clean Slate group which urged an "immediate response from these city employees regarding this favoritism and possible special privilege in the matter of their property tax reductions.

"Senior citizens on fixed incomes, unemployed and underemployed taxpayers in Benton Harbor need to know why city employees in Benton Harbor have enjoyed exclusive tax reductions during the past year," the release stated.

Homes of employees mentioned are south of Empire avenue.

City Assessor John Lottridge said the Clean Slate charges are "a misrepresentation of the facts."

Lottridge said the valuation (tax base) on Morrison's home actually has been increased. There was no reduction on Cooper's home. Reductions were made on homes of Henderson and Mitchell to put them in line with market values.

Lottridge also said other people in the Mayfax terrace area where the city employees live also have had reductions. He said the cuts were made by a successful appeal to the State Tax commission, the city board of review and by Lottridge himself.

Lottridge said he lives in that neighborhood and there has been no cut on his property.

Shoreham Council Reschedules Meeting

Shoreham village council has rescheduled its July meeting to Tuesday, July 15 after failing to gather a quorum last night. Originally the meeting was scheduled for July 1 but was rescheduled for July 7 to miss the Independence Day holiday. Three council members showed up last night, one less than a quorum, so the meeting was rescheduled to next Tuesday.

What Ex-Chieftain Recently Testified?

This man recently testified for the first time about the Watergate case under oath before members of a Watergate grand jury. His testimony was voluntary, but the Watergate Special Prosecutor's office did not reveal what topics were covered. Can you name this presidentially-pardoned former national leader who now lives in California? He is today's newsmagazine in the News Quiz on page 30.

The Quiz is a regular feature of The Herald-Palladium. It is part of this newspaper's visual education program that also supplies current events material to area schools.

Successful Freshman At 64

BENTON SPRINGS — Bernice Reynolds, who registered as a freshman at Andrews University last fall at the age of 64, has raised her grade average from B- to A- during the school year, a whole letter grade.

For spring quarter she got two A's and one B. "I was getting into the swing of it by third (spring) quarter," Mrs. Reynolds said.

When the freshman registered at Andrews her career as a housewife was 37 years old and her high school diploma, nine years older than that.

A 1927 diploma from South Bend, Ind., Central high school and a few night occupational classes — that had been it for school. Thoughts of college had faded with the decades. But at 64 she decided — suddenly, desperately — to give it a try.

On Dec. 14, 1973, the usual cleaning and cooking routine at her home in Kokomo, Ind., came to a shattering halt, when her husband, Harry Reynolds, died without warning of a heart attack. With that she was alone. They had no children.

She now had to depend on friends for transportation. A retinal hemorrhage in her right eye made passing a vision test for a driver's license apparently impossible.

Within two months of her husband's death, she had had all of an empty home she could endure. "I've come to one conclusion," she wrote, "no matter how long I sit here with only my dogs for company, the picture is not going to change unless I change it myself. I would like to convert this personal tragedy into an asset, if possible."

How? By beginning four years of college. She decided on a dietetics major in order to serve, possibly, as a volunteer for community nutrition programs.

College would not be an easy out, however. Beyond competing with young high school graduates, she would have to drive 40 miles a day to and from her sister's home in Edwardsburg, where she planned to move.

She waited until summer for the driving test. The examiner checked her vision twice, paused, and passed her.

In the fall she registered for a sizable load — 12 hours — of three classes: sociology, reading dynamics, and introduction to learning and adjustment.

When her nephew, Harry Smith, heard about it, he hastily ordered for his conservative great-aunt, a navy blue, pullover T-shirt with "Senior Citizens Can Be Freshmen" in two-inch gold letters down the front.

"He gets a bang out of his elderly aunt going back to school," said Mrs. Reynolds. "He thinks it is a 'groovy' idea but has to do a bit of kidding about it. He says it is his favorite conversation bomb that he drops on his friends at parties."

She would have kept it forever safely hidden from campus eyes had she not picked the incident as the topic for a 150-word free-writing assignment in the composition class. The teacher, Dr. Dorothy Conn, saw a good story and read it to the class.

Then the students were watching for it. Over a month later, Jeff Fisher, a young war vet who sat in front of her, thought he saw some of that gold on blue beneath her white car-coat pulled together under her armload of books.

Word spread. She yielded to mounting pressures to remove her coat and the class applauded vigorously.

She wrote on other topics, such as euphemisms, pollsters

(she hates them), a book review of Willa Cather's, "My Antonia," a Halloween trick, and a night in a motel.

The motel story ends with Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds at last finding a nondescript motel with a vacancy late one raining night just out of Memphis, Tenn. The receptionist asks how long they plan to stay. "Over night, of course," says Mrs. Reynolds. The receptionist's "lovely saluting voice is full of surprise. 'Oh, I don't know how much it would be if you are going to stay that long!'"

The book review on "My Antonia," Dr. Conn said, was the best in the class.

On euphemisms, Mrs. Reynolds is for plain English: "My poor Grandma wouldn't have known what a bathroom was. She had to walk the little brown path, and I am sure she would have been horrified had someone suggested that she was going to the john."

The essays brought her top scores and an A for the quarter. "Some of these younger people were thrilled to pieces about my getting an A," she said. "But that's nothing to brag about. Anybody should be able to do that."

Dr. Conn said that the young men in the class have been at their gallant best for her. If Mrs. Reynolds expected to encounter a heedless young generation, she's found the opposite. "The thing I like about being here is that people speak with you whether you know them or not."

Has school been hard? Not the cooking classes. Thirty-seven years of being housewife actually made some of them elementary, even boring. She says she's been finding science, with its "whys and wherefores," far more interesting. She even has an eye on bio-chemistry, a head-knocking course for any 22-year-old pre-med student.

What comes hardest, she said, is concentrating and remembering. But those problems she takes only half seriously. "Sometimes I study a whole day," but then on other days — perhaps more freshman-like — "I goof off like everyone else."

This summer she is working almost full time painting, scrubbing, preparing two small apartment units in Kokomo, Ind., for sale.

She will attend college next year, either at Southwestern Michigan college or at Andrews. She has not yet decided which.

Lower costs, she said, would be the main reason for attending Southwestern. Wherever she attends, she will stay with her sister, Dorothy Smith, in Edwardsburg. She has not decided what she will do with her Kokomo home.

Would she recommend college for others of her age? Certainly. "I think it's great. I'm having a ball." College at 64 is possible, she said. "The way to have the strength is to do it."

Unpredictable Ailment

Acne is an unpredictable ailment, according to a New York dermatologist, Irwin I. Lubowe, MD. An individual case may fluctuate so greatly that it's difficult to tell if treatment has brought it under control, or if it has temporarily subsided on its own, Dr. Lubowe said in an article in a publication for pharmacists.

What makes an acne condition worsen or subside may be the result of many factors. A person's emotional state may play a role, and his environment can be a factor, too, the physician writes.

"Lack of personal cleanliness, especially if the patient lives in an area of high pollution, will add difficulties," he said.

The effect that diet has on an acne condition is controversial, Dr. Lubowe reports. "Many physicians say that diet is minimal or non-existent, but I have seen flare-ups in patients who have eaten chocolate, shellfish, or fried food, or have used large amounts of iodized salt. And it certainly will not hurt the patient to stay away from these foods."

An essential step in trying to bring acne under control involves keeping the affected area free of bacteria. Another is promoting "peeling" of the skin, so that pimples and blackheads will loosen, allowing pores to drain.

Camping Tips

Now that the fourth of July weekend is past, the camping season is in full swing.

In bygone times what started out as adventure for the men of the house only, frequently turned into a disaster.

Bitten by insects, hungry from eating half-cooked food and sick of drinking milk turning sour, the troops returned home more than happy to settle for their three squares a day.

Modern advancements, especially in touring vehicles complete with kitchen, bathroom and television facilities, have made camping a pleasant adventure for the entire family.

Mother now can bring her favorite television shows with her by including a reliable solid-stage portable in the caravan. Some portables are rechargeable on their own batteries and others plug into the automobile cigarette lighter. Camping tips to clip and take

1. If using a trailer for the first time, practice maneuvering it on isolated streets at home.
2. Practice setting up your own equipment in the backyard, especially if new.
3. Plan ahead so that you arrive at camping designation before dark.
4. Seek out a campsite with good drainage and high above streams that could overflow and wash you out in a severe storm.
5. Avoid trees or exposed places that attract lightning.
6. Never stray away from marked trails around the camp grounds.
7. Build campfires on level ground.
8. Carry a compass and map.
9. Travel in groups of three or more. Above all, beware of getting so far away from the campsite that you could encounter roaming animals.
10. Clean up the area before leaving camp.

HOME-GROWN VEGETABLES ARE IN

Gardening Popularity Soars

According to the scene around town, home-grown vegetables are "in". But, whether you grow your own or purchase them at the local farm, fruit stand or neighborhood fresh food store, color, texture, vitamins and minerals.

Steaming is the preferred method for vegetable cookery. It can be done in any pan, pot, steamer insert or even large fry pan that fits the vegetable. A 10 1/2-inch fry pan is perfect for asparagus, broccoli, green beans, spinach or artichokes. When steaming, do not fill the utensil more than 1/2 to 3/4 full of vegetables.

Most steamed vegetables taste less watery, retaining their full natural flavor. Delicate vegetables are not jostled or injured during cooking and the small amount of water assures the retention of most vitamins and minerals.

A tight fitting lid is essential as it prevents the moisture from escaping while helping to cook the vegetables. After cooking green vegetables, be sure to remove the lid and serve immediately in order to retain the attractive color.

The pan, pot or fry pan should be made of a good heat conducting material so the amount of heat the vegetable receives can be controlled. A good example of this would be stainless steel cookware with an aluminum bottom. Cooking should begin on medium heat and when steam appears around the lid, turn heat to low. This method may take a little longer, but the fresh flavor is worth the extra minutes. The vegetables should be carefully timed to be tender-crisp. It is important to watch the pot and not let it boil dry.

Some vegetables such as squash or tomatoes have a high water content, no extra liquid needs to be added for steaming — this is true with Fresh Vegetable Medley. An energy saving dish is Garden Vegetables — full of natural flavor — beans, new potatoes, carrots and onions, all cooked together to perfection in one pot.

GUIDE FOR STEAMING FRESH VEGETABLES

Pour the suggested amount of hot water into a 10 1/2-inch fry pan, add vegetable, salt and cover. Cook over medium heat. When steam appears around the lid, then turn heat to low. Do not let fry pan boil dry. Remove lid immediately after cooking green vegetables to retain color. Serve immediately with butter or favorite sauce. Here are some suggestions.

Asparagus: Cut off coarse woody ends of one pound asparagus keeping them about the same length. Soak in water several minutes to remove sand. If desired, peel stems with carrot peeler. Alternate stalks and spear ends in fry pan for even cooking. Add 1/2 cup water and steam as directed five to seven minutes.

Artichokes: Remove coarse bottom leaves of four to eight medium artichokes. With sharp knife cut off bottom of artichokes to make them level and cut 1/2 to 1-inch straight across top. With scissors trim tips of leaves. Place in fry pan with two cups water and one tablespoon lemon juice; cover. Steam 25 to 35 minutes.

Broccoli: Remove large leaves and coarse stem ends of one pound broccoli. Split lengthwise several times. Place in fry pan with 3/4 cup water; cover. Steam 15 to 20 minutes.

Cauliflower: With sharp knife cut off bottom to make cauliflower level. Place in fry pan, stem down, with 3/4 cup water; cover. Steam 15 to 20 minutes.

Green Beans: Place one pound green beans in fry pan with 3/4 cup water. If desired, add small onions, mushrooms or cooked bacon; cover. Steam 20 to 25 minutes.

Spinach: Wash one pound spinach to remove sand. Separate leaves from stem; discard stems. Place spinach in fry pan with 1/2 cup water; cover. Steam 5 to 10 minutes.

FRESH VEGETABLE MEDLEY

2 tablespoons butter or mar## garine

- 1 large onion, sliced
- 1 large green pepper, cut in strips
- 2 pounds zucchini, sliced
- 3 large ripe tomatoes, quartered
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon basil
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

In 10 1/2-inch fry pan melt butter over medium heat. Add onion and green pepper and saute until tender. Add remaining ingredients, toss gently; cover. Continue cooking over medium heat until steam appears around lid, turn heat to low and cook all the vegetables a total of 15 minutes. Remove cover and continue cooking until vegetables are tender and most of the liquid evaporates, about five minutes. Makes four to six servings.

GARDEN VEGETABLES

- 3/4 pound salt pork
- 2 pounds new potatoes
- 2 pounds whole green beans
- 2 onions, sliced
- 5 carrots, sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground pepper

Cut rind from salt pork, slice into 1/4-inch slices. In five-quart Dutch oven brown salt pork on both sides over medium heat. Remove from heat; drain off excess fat. Add remaining ingredients in order given. Cover. Place over medium heat and heat to boiling, when steam appears around the lid, turn heat to low. Cook a total of 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp. Makes four to six servings.

"Interest in home gardening finds demand for vegetables seeds soaring to record levels, along with brisk sales of shovels, hoes, rakes and other hand tools," says US News and World Report. May a beneficent Mother Nature send bright sunlight, gentle rains and bumper crops to your garden.

And may you have a file of great vegetable recipes, for dishes which the family will relish, of which they will want second helpings. Serve them flavorful bowls such as the Skillet Vegetable Medley. In it are cooked green beans, mushrooms, zucchini and tomatoes, slyly seasoned with a good dash of the original Worcestershire sauce. Perhaps surprisingly, Worcestershire sauce is as much of a flavor-enhancer of vegetables as it is of meats, fish, fowl, cheese or eggs.

SKILLET VEGETABLE MEDLEY

- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon original Worcestershire sauce
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 1/4 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves, crumbled
- 1/4 teaspoon powdered mustard
- 1/2 pound green beans, cut into 2-inch lengths
- 1/2 pound mushrooms, halved
- 2 medium zucchini, sliced
- 2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges

In a large skillet combine oil, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, sugar, salt, oregano and mustard. Bring to boiling point and add beans. Return to boiling point; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for five minutes. Add mushrooms and zucchini. Cover and simmer for three minutes. Add tomatoes. Cover and simmer for one minute. Serve hot. To serve chilled, do not cook tomatoes; cover and refrigerate, adding tomatoes just before serving. Makes six servings.

SUMMER SQUASH ITALIANO

WORCESTERED CRUMB CHEESE TOPPING

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 2 teaspoons original Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

In a medium saucepan melt butter. Stir in bread crumbs, Worcestershire sauce and cheese. Spoon over hot cooked vegetables such as tomato halves and broil for two minutes or use as a topping over asparagus, peas and green beans.

Is all the back-breaking toil involved in having your own home vegetable garden worthwhile?

For the answer, just observe the special pride a home gardener feels when he harvests summer's first vine-ripened vegetables. He'll beam from ear to ear.

Those home-grown fussed-over vegetables deserve very special treatment in the kitchen, too. Here, in ample time for the home harvest, are two new vegetable recipes that provide superb settings for home-grown squash, tomatoes and green peppers (or for that matter the produce you buy at a roadside stand or your neighborhood supermarket).

Summer Squash Italiano is a meatless skillet dish that has a satisfying barbecue flavor. Its savory sauce can be made quickly and easily with a packaged spaghetti sauce mix.

Stir Fried Peppers and Tomatoes combine two favorite home-grown vegetables in an Oriental stir-fried recipe. The perky flavor of Worcestershire sauce adds just enough flavor to highlight the fresh vegetables.

Both recipes are quick-cooking to keep the vegetables at their peak flavor.

SUMMER SQUASH ITALIANO

- 2 carrots, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 envelope (1 1/2-oz.) spaghetti sauce mix
- 2 pounds zucchini or yellow crookneck squash, sliced
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 2 tablespoons vinegar

Cook carrots in oil in large covered skillet for five minutes.

FRESH VEGETABLE MEDLEY

Add contents of sauce mix envelope, squash, tomatoes and vinegar. Cover and cook 10 minutes longer, until tender. Four to six servings.

STIR FRIED PEPPERS AND TOMATOES

- 4 green peppers, cut in 1-inch squares
- 2 tablespoons oil or melted shortening
- 4 firm tomatoes, cut in wedges
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

Cutons, if desired. Cook peppers in oil in large skillet 5 to 10 minutes, until tender-crisp. Add tomatoes and Worcestershire sauce; cook and stir five minutes, just until hot. Sprinkle with cutons. Four to five servings.

Mention Italian cuisine to a non-Italian and he immediately thinks of pasta — served up as spaghetti, macaroni or noodles.

Although pasta is the nation's most famous staple, Italy's produce is, by far, its greater glory. Various vegetables thrive in the rich soil and sunny climate of Italy. Tomatoes (simmered with herbs and spices for pasta sauce), broccoli (cooked in white wine, garlic and oil), fennel (dressed with oil and vinegar and served as a salad), mushrooms (grilled with oil, garlic and parsley), artichokes (stuffed and baked), zucchini (braised in tomato sauce) and eggplant (branded and fried) are among the most popular.

Suggested here is Fritto Misto, an Italian vegetable specialty which may be served as an appetizer or accompaniment to the main dish. In Italian the word "fritto" means fried and "misto" means mixed. Thus, Fritto Misto is an assortment of raw vegetables which is breaded and fried in deep hot oil until golden brown. Any combination of vegetables may be used — cauliflowerets, green pepper rings, onion rings, zucchini slices, carrot sticks, fresh mushrooms or parboiled green beans.

FRITTO MISTO

- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 3 tablespoons milk

- 4 cups cauliflowerets
- 3 large green peppers, sliced into 1/4-inch rings
- 3 large onions, sliced into 1/4-inch thick rings and separated
- 3 zucchini, sliced into 1/2-inch thick slices
- 1 pound carrots, peeled and sliced into 1/4-inch thick sticks
- 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced 1/2-inch thick
- 1 pound green beans, par-boiled for 5 minutes
- 1/2 cup unsifted flour
- 1 1/2 cups seasoned bread crumbs
- Peanut oil

Combine egg and milk in small bowl; mix thoroughly. Toss vegetables in flour, dip in egg mixture, then roll in bread crumbs. Place in single layer on cookie sheet; chill 30 minutes.

Fry vegetables a single layer at a time, in deep hot (375 degrees) peanut oil until golden brown, two to three minutes, turning once. Drain on paper towels. Keep hot until all are fried; serve immediately. Serves six as a main course accompaniment or 12 as hot appetizer.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Parents Need Prompt Help

Dear Ann Landers: We keep hearing lectures and reading articles for parents who need to know how to help their children get off drugs. I have a different kind of question. What can children do to help parents who become addicted? I am not speaking about pot or LSD or heroin. I'm referring to a nice, respectable middle-aged couple in the suburbs who are hooked on barbiturates and amphetamines.

My mother and dad have a medicine chest full of Seconal, Dalmane, Nembutal, barbitals, phenobarbital and Eskatrol. I'm sure they would be highly insulted if anyone suggested that they were drug addicts. When I told my mother amphetamines were "speed" she said, "Don't be silly."

My dad insists he can't get a night's sleep without pills. They both seem to think they are in no danger because the drugs are prescribed by our family doctor. What can I do to help them? — Concerned Son

Dear Son: Call your family doctor and ask him if he is aware that our parents are addicted. HE is the one who should handle this problem — and I hope he does, promptly.

Not Enough

Dear Ann Landers: I have read with interest several letters in your column from widows whose husbands had very little life insurance, or in some cases none at all. Some of those widows were bitter because their husbands had not "planned ahead." But in my case, I was the guilty party.

Every time our agent suggested that Mel increase his insurance, I came out with that stupid remark, "We're insurance poor." The truth was that I, like so many other wives, thought my husband would live forever. Widowhood was something that happened to other women. Today, I'm that other woman.

Last week, while going through my husband's desk drawers I came across an insurance proposal for $40,000 of life insurance. It was dated five months before Mel died. It was a good plan and we could have afforded it. Our agent was trying to help and I knew it, but Mel was in perfect health and I figured I could use that $21.57 a month toward a new color TV.

Today, I'm working in a steak restaurant trying to keep my family together. Believe me, it's tough. I hope you will print this letter for the benefit of all those wives out there who don't appreciate life insurance as much as widows do. Sign me — Kicking Myself In Winston-Salem

Dear Friend: Twenty-twenty hindsight is easy. The family that looks ahead and makes provisions for the long shots is the one that sleeps better at night. I'm sorry your husband didn't override your veto. Good luck to you, dear.

Travelogue At AU Sunday

BERRIEN SPRINGS — Ted Burniller, a Cincinnati architect, will present the film, "England, Scotland and Wales," at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, July 13, in Johnson auditorium, Andrews university.

The film is the fourth time. So often when a husband takes his life, the widow wonders if people think perhaps their marriage was bad — that if she had been a better wife she could have prevented the tragedy.

Thank God my family and friends didn't think that way a year ago. — N.J. Widow

Dear Friend: I appreciate your confirmation. Only one who has been there knows what it's like.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If I have learned anything from writing a humor column over the past ten years it's ... Don't laugh!

Today's absurdities may be tomorrow's realities.

What does that mean, you ask? Only that in 1968, I was hanging around a swimming pool one day reading a wild book called "The Great American Liar" by Alan Abel. Alan had just founded a nonexistent organization (with offices in a broom closet in New York) called the Society for Indecency To Naked Animals (SINA).

He appeared in leading newspapers, magazines, and talk shows on behalf of his campaign to put every horse in a pair of Bermuda shorts, every cow in a half slip and girdles on rhinos. Choked with emotion for the project, he admonished an audience on the Merv Griffin show to "Remember, a nude horse is a rude horse." (One woman donated $40,000 to support his work, which he refused.)

I like to tell in the pool from laughter.

This week I read a news story from the Associated Press wire service, in which a firm in Wisconsin turns out bras for cows. I don't know about you, but it boggles my mind to think of 5,000 cows this year alone running around in bras that cost $31 each.

The company was founded 30 years ago in an effort to make cows more comfortable and to induce them to give more milk, and is (excuse the expression) on the upswing.

The bras (available only in basic barnyard brown) come in four sizes: small (for the 900-1099 pound cow); medium (for 1100-1599 pound cow); large (1600 pounds), and extra large for anything else that's left.

As I told my husband, "That is the most incredible thing I have ever read."

"What did you expect, 'One size fits all'?"

"I don't mean that. I mean it's getting tougher and tougher to write something so ridiculous that people will laugh."

"You don't call that ridiculous?"

"No, I expect any day now to turn on my TV set and hear a testimonial from a full-figured bovine saying, 'Living bras used to commit suicide on me until I got my new Need-A-Lift bra. Now, no one knows I'm wearing one.'"

"If you're right," he said, "then it will only be a matter of time before cows will seek liberation, band together and publicly burn their bras."

"That's funny," I giggled. "Laugh now," he said dryly. "In two weeks, it'll be too late."

"It turned out to be very costly," replied South. "We had a game, slam and rubber waiting for us and you had to bid seven and throw it all away."
"If you had just passed over East's two hearts, I would have bid three clubs and we would have reached the slam," continued North.

This is the sort of question that is impossible to answer really well because we don't have enough information. How did the bidding go? Who was on lead?

After some bidding sequences a double is indicated. After others, you should pass if your double may tell declarer how to play and make the contract. We suspect this did happen after our correspondent stuck in a double.

There's no reason to pick up the entire tab today for a fun activity with friends. Let each pay a fair share.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Be extra-patient with members of your household, even though they may pull a few stunts that will exasperate you. You can handle things.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Don't rehash and old, irritating issue with a person in your charge today. Forgiveness will win you an ally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
If shopping today, be careful when it comes to novel merchandise. There's a good chance you'll buy something you'll never use.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Avoid the company today of one whose goals are not in harmony with yours. It won't be worth the effort to try and convince him you're right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
It's to your advantage to play a little hard-to-get today in your dealings. Let them come to you for a change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
It's not a good day to make requests of a material nature from your friends. It could prove embarrassing when you're turned down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You'll profit more in the long run today if you think in terms of what's best for all concerned, rather than "What's in it for me?"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
You have tendency today to jump to conclusions. Your hasty assumptions could create a problem.

This Little Girl Has Big Appetite

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Cheree Taylor won an eating contest by downing 11 hard boiled eggs in four minutes, placed second in the pie eating event and then polished off six cotton candies, six ice cream cones, fried chicken, potato salad and baked beans.

Since that Fourth of July picnic contest, the skinny 7-year-old has been eating, eating, eating.

"Until last weekend we had to literally force her to eat and sometimes we even had to paddle her rear," her mother, Sherry Taylor, said Tuesday. "We had even taken her to the doctor because she was so skinny."

"We don't know what to do now — be happy or worried. I don't know what's gotten into her."

Ever since the Friday eating binge, the 55-pound youngster has been stuffing herself daily with more food than "anybody in the family," said Mrs.

Taylor, who has two sons.

She says Cheree packs away a big breakfast, a big lunch and a big dinner, sandwiched around snacks.

Mrs. Taylor, 31, says she isn't really worried about Cheree's health "because she burns it off and hasn't gained any weight," but she says she has started to wonder about the family's budget.

Her husband, Fred, is an unemployed aerospace worker and the family's only source of income is unemployment insurance.

"She's eating us out of house and home," Mrs. Taylor said. "You ought to see our grocery bill. I keep asking her, 'When are you going to slow down?' And she just says, 'But I'm hungry.'"

Mrs. Taylor said she was amazed when her 4-foot-1 daughter insisted on entering the egg eating contest for children at a Jaycees picnic.

"I told her she couldn't eat enough to win but she was determined and she did it," Mrs. Taylor said. "She would have won the pie eating contest, too, except she ate the crust and all and the boy who won didn't bother with the crust."

"The judge just looked at her and said, 'My God, she ate the whole thing.'"

When a newsmen asked Cheree where she was putting all that food, she replied, "In my stomach."

That seemed designed to dispel any idea that his decision to run might be affected by the health of his wife Betty who underwent breast cancer surgery last fall but is reported to have made an excellent recovery.

BIG EATER: Chere Taylor, 7, of Titusville, Fla., won the egg eating contest at a Jaycee picnic July Fourth by eating 11 eggs. The 50-pounder then took second in the pie-eating contest and for good measure ate six cotton candies, six ice creams, fried chicken, potato salad, baked beans and kidney bean salad. (AP Wirephoto)

PLANS TO SPEND $10 MILLION

Ford Nomination Drive Opens

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's campaign managers hope to spend the full $10 million permitted by law in his campaign for the 1976 Republican nomination, an informed source said today.

Ford campaign officials said the spending limits in the new federal campaign law mean the President Ford Committee will have about 50 to 55 employees. By contrast, President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 campaign committee had more than 300 employees.

Following Ford's formal announcement of candidacy Tuesday, his campaign managers were said to be considering whether to seek the $10 million in private funds or accept up to $5 million in federal funds, the source said. The new law gives candidates matching federal funds after they raise $2,500 in contributions of under $250 in each of 20 states.

Another early decision will be where to find permanent office space for the committee headed by former Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway and the fundraising operation headed by former Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard.

The current law limits candidates to spending $10 million in pursuing the nomination. Once nominated, they can spend another $20 million in the general election. The total limit of $30 million is about one-half of what President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 campaign spent and also is less than what was spent by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., the 1972 Democratic challenger.

Ford, however, is gearing up in anticipation of a primary battle. His announcement came the same day that it was disclosed a committee is being formed for a possible challenge to the President by former California Gov. Ronald Reagan. Reagan denied reports that he had decided to challenge Ford and said his future plans "will be announced some time this year."

He said he was aware of the efforts to organize a committee to examine his chances as a candidate. "The committee people told me of their intentions and I neither encouraged nor discouraged them," he said.

Two leading GOP conservatives, meanwhile, said Ford is steadily gaining political strength within the GOP and could virtually wrap up the nomination by the end of 1975.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, predicted Reagan would eventually decide against a presidential race and said about Ford: "Every day that passes reduces the likelihood of a serious challenge to him in the party."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., saying he will back Ford "as my President" while awaiting a decision by Reagan, added that if the business upturn continues, unemployment drops and the President has a little good luck in foreign affairs, by the end of the year "Ford's going to be impossible to beat and there's no Democrat who can beat him either."

On the Democratic side, National Chairman Robert S. Strauss declared that most of the President's actions in recent months have been "calculated to assure his nomination" but predicted the Democrats will win next year by nominating "an equally likable and honorable Democrat who also is right on the issues that trouble this nation."

Ford formally announced his candidacy in a 350-word statement he read to reporters

Michigan Almost Got A Break

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A freshman legislator who tried to lower state income taxes by two-tenths of a percent Tuesday nearly — but not quite — got enough tax-conscious House members to go along with the idea.

The amendment was proposed by state Rep. Monte Gerald, D-Madison Heights, as an incentive to trim state spending. It would have reduced revenue by between $30 million and $32 million for the fiscal year which started July 1.

Gerald's proposal received laudatory speeches, a few sarcastic remarks and a total of 31 votes, five short of the number needed for passage.

The amendment would have cut the state income tax from 4.6 per cent to 4.4 per cent, effective next Jan. 1.

The rate was raised from 3.9 per cent to 4.6 per cent just a few months ago to pay for the revenue lost by repealing the state sales tax on food and drugs. That repeal came in last November's election.

Gerald said in a two-page memo distributed last week his amendment would be an incentive to cut the budget.

He also said the reduction would help ease qualms about Gov. William Milliken's business tax package, which critics say will raise the tax bills of many small businessmen. The tax bill also is designed to boost state revenues.

"The proposed amendment reducing the tax rate ... would force the legislature to respond to the people of this state who, in large measure, wish us to reduce state spending," said Gerald.

The vote was 55-41 against the amendment, which would have been tacked onto a bill repealing corporate income tax. The bill is an auxiliary to Milliken's business tax reform package, which passed the House last week.

House Minority Leader Dennis Cawthorne, D-Manistee, said Gerald had the right idea, but used the wrong method. Cawthorne suggested the budget be cut first, then the tax rate.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Dominic Jacobetti, D-Hogansburg, said commitments in the Upper Peninsula don't seem to need the tax rate.

Indira Gandhi Like 'King' In Peasant Village

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer
FATEHPUR, India (AP) —
The farmers of this little village sit around in the shade these days waiting for monsoon rains to soften the earth for summer planting.

As the dry wind shifts dust between their huts, they talk about their bad spring crop and the high price of sugar. No one brings up Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's assumption of emergency powers because only a few have even heard about it and they don't understand what it means.

"I have heard the radio news," says village head man Ved Ram, ripe with the wisdom of his 40 years. "But half the things we can't understand. We are all illiterate."

More than 80 per cent of India's some 600 million inhabitants live in villages like this 150-family cluster of stone and cow-dung huts less than 20 miles south of New Delhi. For them, Mrs. Gandhi's suspension of civil liberties and arrests of political opponents are nothing but an abstraction for other people to worry about.

"I can't pass judgment on her because she is like king," adds Hari Kishan between sips on a clay hookah, or waterpipe.
"She's a very great woman. I know she is Jawaharlal Nehru's daughter."

Nehru was India's first prime minister. Mrs. Gandhi's rise to the top was largely the fruit of wide exposure during the days when her father ran the country as a widower and she was his official hostess.

Her name and that of her Congress Party are about the only political symbols people know in Fatehpur. They measure the New Delhi government by prices at the local market and their lack of irrigation canals, caring nothing about constitutional principles like freedom of the press and

"I have never seen Mrs.
Gandhi," says Ram Meher. "All
I know is that she was responsible for our prices going up.
She hasn't done anything for us.
I don't know anything that's happening in New Delhi."

Meher, 21, works a six-acre family plot to support himself, his 16-year-old wife of six weeks, two younger brothers and his father and mother. The family boasts 10 buffalo and 10 cows, making them well off in a nation where the average annual per capita income is only about $90. The per capita income in the United States is a little more than $4,700 annually.

Their kind of farm is what
Mrs. Gandhi says she is trying to arrange for India's millions of landless peasants, using emergency powers to erase rural debts and seize plots from rich landlords and distribute them to the poor.

"I have heard Indira Gandhi has passed some measures on

WAITING FOR RAIN: Hari Kishan sucks on a clay water pipe recently as he and other farmers from the Indian village of Fatehpur sit in the shade waiting for monsoon rains to soften the earth for summer planting. For them, Mrs. Gandhi's suspension of civil liberties and arrests of political opponents are nothing but an abstraction for other people to worry about. Says Hari Kishan: "I can't pass judgment on her because she is like king. She's a very great woman." (AP Wirephoto) grain and land and these things," says Kishan. "But I'm not sure what. If it affects us, it's good. We are poor people here. There are no canals for irrigation."

The question is whether Mrs.
Gandhi's economic reforms announced with fanfare by the censored New Delhi press, will ever affect people like Meher, Kishan and others who work the baked, parched earth around Fatehpur.

Similar reforms have been announced in the past, never to find their way out of the dusty ministry corridors in New Delhi, through sluggish state administrations, down to the inadequate district officers and into the lives of poor farmers and their hands.

But Meher said his neighbors say they support the Congress Party, mostly because it's the only one they know.

"I'm always behind Indira Gandhi," head man Ram explains. "Indira is Congress here. We have never seen any other leaders. We never get in touch with other parties. So whether it is good or bad, we have to live with Congress."

But isn't it a bad thing to put people in jail without warrants and forbid political dissent, a visitor asks over a welcome ceremony glass of heated buffalo milk.

"I don't know about that," he responds. "But around here nobody talks ill of Mrs. Gandhi.
That's not done."

Isabel Suffers Double Defeat

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Isabel Peron suffered a double blow at the hands of the Peronist movement when labor forced her to abandon the wage ceiling and the Senate named a successor to the presidency over her objections.

The General Labor Confederation (CGT), backbone of the ruling Peronist movement, called off its two-day general strike 10 hours early Tuesday after Mrs. Peron agreed to abandon the 50 per cent limit on wage hikes she ordered last week as part of an austerity program to counter inflation.

There was no indication, however, that Mrs. Peron had agreed to the labor leaders' demand that she get rid of Jose Lopez Rega, her conservative private secretary and social welfare minister who is the dominant figure in the government.

Lopez Rega has alienated many sectors of the Peronist movement and is also out of favor with the leaders of the armed forces.

In another move against Lopez Rega, the Peronist-dominated Senate elected Sen. Italo Luder as its president, placing the moderate, popular former law professor first in line for the presidency should Mrs. Peron be forced to resign, become incapacitated or die.

Mrs. Peron opposed the Senate election. She said she planned to submit legislation authorizing the presidential successor to be elected by both houses of Congress.

As long as the Senate presidency was vacant, Mrs. Peron's successor was the president of the lower house. He is Haul Lastiri, Lopez Rega's son-in-law.

Subways, buses and trains resumed operation Tuesday afternoon after the CGT's back-to-work order. But it was too late for most industrial plants to reopen, and most of them were not scheduled to operate today because it is the Independence Day holiday.

A NGT communique expressed the unions' support for Mrs. Peron and said each worker would give a day's pay each month to "strengthening the economy."

The strike was called when Mrs. Peron refused to ratify previously negotiated labor contracts for wage increases ranging up to 130 per cent. Union leaders said the raises were necessary to cope with inflation raging at an annual rate of over 110 per cent.

The truce with the CGT eased Mrs. Peron's worst crisis since she succeeded to the presidency on the death of her husband, President Juan D. Peron. But with Lopez Rega still at her side, the reconciliation appeared likely to be a temporary one.

Total Of Jobless A State Record

DETROIT (AP) — There were more people out of work in Michigan in June than at any time since the state began keeping track of such figures 10 years ago, the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) said Tuesday.

MESC Deputy Director J.C. Friedman said there were 633,500 persons looking for a job last month in Michigan — 15.1 per cent of the state's work force of 4,192,500 persons.

In May, the unemployment rate was 13.1 per cent with 531,000 persons out of work.

The increase was laid to a seasonal influx of students into the job market, Friedman said.

In June of 1974, the state's unemployment rate was 8.8 per cent or 352,400 persons out of work, the MESC said.

In the Detroit area — Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Lapeer, Livingston and St. Clair Counties — the June jobless rate was 15.7 per cent. There were 314,800 persons out of work in the area last month, the commission said, compared with a 13.7 per cent unemployment rate in May for 265,600 persons looking for jobs.

There were some minor job gains in June because of call-backs in manufacturing industries and moderate seasonal gains in construction and service industries, Friedman said.

However, the unemployment rate in Michigan was higher in March and February when it peaked at 15.3 per cent of the labor pool for both months. The total number of persons jobless in those two months was less because of the labor force was less then, Friedman said.

Britain's Labor Leaders Triumph

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Labor government scored its first victory in its battle against Europe's highest rate of inflation when the coal miners agreed to shelve a demand for a 60 per cent wage increase.

The decision Tuesday came after a long, angry meeting at the annual convention of the 270,000-member National Union of Mineworkers.

The meeting discussed a demand by militant union leaders in Yorkshire and Scotland for a $70.40-a-week increase for workers at the coal face, raising their basic wage to $220 a week. Prime Minister Harold Wilson had told the convention on Monday that such inflationary pay raises would be "crazy, even suicidal" in the current state of the British economy.

After violent argument, the convention voted to replace the word "demand" with "seek." This put the miners on record that they want the $220 weekly wage but are prepared to forego it for this year.

The vote was a defeat for two militant Communist leaders of the union, Mick McGahey of Scotland and Arthur Scargill of Yorkshire and a victory for the union president, Joe Gormley, who told the convention the $220 demand was "madness."

Inflation in Britain is currently running at the rate of 24 per cent, and Wilson's government has announced it intends to limit all pay increases during the coming year to 10 per cent, up to a maximum of $13.20 a week.

The miners are considered the key to the success of any wage-ceiling policy because of coal's importance to the British economy and the miners' slowdown and strike in the winter of 1973-74 which torpedoed Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath's attempt to enforce mandatory wage controls.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey told the House of Commons Tuesday the government is determined to introduce statutory controls to keep wage increases down to 10 per cent in order to convince foreign creditors that the government means business.

Healey warned that failure to accept a 10 per cent limit would mean a 10 per cent cut in living standards and government expenditure or the government would have to "crawl" to the International Monetary Fund for a loan, the terms of which would be imposed from abroad.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

THE OLD South Meeting House is where the Boston Tea Party originated. In this Congregational church on the night of Dec. 16, 1773, several thousand citizens sat waiting for word that Royal Gov. Thomas Hutchinson had placed a ban on the shiploads of tea waiting in the harbor. When he refused, the crowd, armed with iron bars, boarded the ships and threw the chests of tea into the harbor. The World Almanac notes.

STRIKE CALLED OFF: Argentine labor leaders embrace each other Tuesday in Buenos Aires after they called off a 48-hour general strike that had halted all activity throughout the country. The strike was halted after Argentine President Isabel Peron gave in to striking workers' demands and approved wage increases up to 130 per cent. (AP Wirephoto)

Nice Way To Wait In Line

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is providing live entertainment for tourists while they wait, sometimes for two or three hours, to see some of the capital's monuments.

Five young actor-musicians, the Strolling Troubadours, will perform through August at tourist sites in Washington.

The $38,000 program is supported jointly by the National Endowment for the Arts and National Capital Parks.

Heads of the two federal agencies, Nancy Hanks and Jack Fish, attended the opening performance Tuesday on the Ellipse, just south of the White House.

The performers, who will do four shows a day Tuesday through Sunday plus extra presentations, have prepared a variety of programs which they will try to tailor to their audiences — Western, Southern, mid-American or whatever.

Miss Hanks said the idea was hatched in the National Council on the Arts, a presidentially appointed panel of 26 members which acts in an advisory capacity to her agency.

"We were talking about using young, creative people and the bicentennial and we said where would you find so many people from all over the country, waiting to get into our monuments?" she said.

The five performers tell stories, do mime, encourage audience participation and sing songs.

If the idea catches on, it will be repeated during the bicentennial year of 1976.

CHILDREN PLAY IN NEW LAND: Laughing Vietnamese children play on mat recently at Bright Life Camp, a refugee center near Tacoma, Wash. Known as "Trai Doi Sang" to its adult and children residents, the camp is the only formal state program in the country to handle refugee aid. (AP Wirephoto)

Refugees Get Bright Start At Washington State Camp

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer
CAMP MURRAY, Wash. (AP) — There are children scurrying around Bright Life Camp, playing noisy games amid the fragrant pines and splashing merrily in the lake. But this is no ordinary summer camp.

Bright Life Camp is known as "Trai Doi Sang" to its residents, all of them Vietnamese refugees — adults and children — here as part of Washington's refugee assistance program, the only such formal state program in the country.

The program, which has drawn the praise of President Ford, has aided over 400 Vietnamese refugees. Of that number about 300 have been placed in communities around the state, which is almost the same size as South Vietnam.

Gov. Dan Evans, the only governor on the President's Vietnamese Refugee Advisory Commission, says that because of the program's success he'll probably open the state to more than the 500 originally agreed upon.

Almost 50 workers from three state agencies forge a welcome that involves meeting the refugees at the airport, providing food and lodging, job counseling, and, most importantly, finding them new homes. While at the camp, set up at Camp Murray, near Tacoma, the refugees live in freshly painted bunkhouses.

"We are not trying to make them 'red-blooded Americans,'" says Peter Delaney of the governor's staff. "We aren't trying to change their cultural values or get into their heads. We're just trying to build up trust and offer help."

Both children and adults seem reasonably happy with their temporary life at the camp which contrasts sharply with the stark conditions at Camp Pendleton, Calif., where they came from.

Nguyen Van Tho, 33, a former U.S. government contractor in Saigon, put it this way: "Sure, we being treated fair. We are refugees and can make no demands. We have to live with what they provide. We have no choice."

But beneath the patina of coping is anguish, say camp workers.

"This is an extremely traumatic time for all of them," said Ed Burke, a state official who was dispatched by the governor to Camp Pendleton to recruit the 500 new state residents.

Virtually all of the refugees fled because they feared for their lives, said Burke, who served in Vietnam as a Marine.

One refugee, Dao Van Kiem, had good reason to fear, he said. He was the personal bodyguard and attaché to South Vietnamese President Thieu.

"I was a captain in the Army and I know the Communist policy very well," he said, his English brushed with French. Tho said: "I felt I would be target for Charlie if they take over."

Many refugees in camp say their biggest sorrow is that they left relatives behind.

"I'm very sad," said Tong Thi de Van, 27, a single woman from Saigon. "I've written to my mother, but the Communists have cut off all communication."

Others tell stories of families being split and of frantic attempts to regain contact. Kiem is trying to be reunited with his fiancée, who is safe, but miles away in Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Some of the refugees blame the U.S. government for the fall of Saigon, but won't be openly critical, Burke said.

Most of the refugees say their prime concern at this point is employment.

"They told me it is always cold in Washington," said Tho. "But I say 'I don't care. I am looking for the job.' You can buy warm clothes if you have a job. If you have money, you can get anything you want."

Tho has a temporary job working as an interpreter and interviewer at the camp.

Job counselors said when the refugees first arrived, the camp was flooded with calls from people who wanted cheap labor, domestic help, or sauna parlor "hostesses." All such inquiries were rebuffed and legitimate job offers are trickling in, said Janet Mandell.

The first placement was for a $5.50 an hour job as a draftsman for the Tacoma Boat Co.

But the counselors have stopped trying to match refugees with jobs before they leave Bright Life Camp. The refugees are interviewed and taught how to fill out job applications and then once they are placed with a sponsor in the community, the local employment office is alerted and asked to be of assistance.

State officials figure it will take 90 jobs to support the 500 refugees, whose number includes numerous dependents. Many of the newcomers are skilled in trades or professions. A number speak fluent English.

Before they leave Camp Murray, they are given welfare grants — $380 for a family of four — food stamps and stamps for free medical and dental care for six months. The federal government is picking up the tab.

None of the refugees leave camp before they are matched with a sponsor. The sponsor, sometimes a civic group, sometimes a church or often an individual family, may provide totally for the family until it becomes selfdependent. The sponsor may also underwrite partial support or merely act as a "big brother or sister" to help the family adjust.

The state program has attracted 200 more sponsors than needed although people willing to take large families are still being sought, Burke said.

Michigan Sued By Jackson Prisoners

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Prisoners at Southern Michigan Prison have filed suit against the state, charging health care facilities for inmates are inadequate and in violation of constitutional rights.

The Prisoners Progress Association filed the suit Tuesday in Grand Rapids' federal court on behalf of all prisoners in state penal institutions.

The group demanded recommendations in a state-financed study of prison health care facilities be implemented immediately. The study found medical care to be seriously inadequate.

The suit also demanded state prison health care facilities be upgraded to meet minimum standards set for hospitals not connected with the Department of Corrections.

The suit, which named Gov. William Milliken and department director Perry Johnson as defendants, charged state officials failed to provide inmates with qualified medical personnel, adequate medical equipment and emergency medical treatment.

It also charged existing facilities are "unsanitary and vermin-infested ... thereby inhibiting recovery of inmates."

A similar suit was filed last Thursday in federal court in Detroit by four Jackson inmates. They claimed health care at the prison's infirmary was inadequate and called for its immediate closing.

Hearing On Student Loans Due

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A public hearing on proposed rule changes in Michigan's Guaranteed Student Loan Program will be held next month, the state Board of Education said Tuesday.

New rules would hike the annual loan maximum from $1,500 to $2,500 for college student borrowers, officials said. The cumulative limit for a student's entire undergraduate borrowing will remain at $7,500.

The state program has loaned more than $125 million to 90,000 students since 1962.

The hearing will be Aug. 7 in Lansing's Leonard Building.

Vietnam Brothers Starting 2nd Round

By JAY SHARRITT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Vo Huynh and Vo Suu are brothers. Formerly of North Vietnam, they helped NBC News film the story of the war in Vietnam for 14 and 16 years, respectively.

Last April, they became refugees for the second time in their lives. NBC evacuated them, 11 other Vietnamese staffers and their families from Saigon shortly before it fell to North Vietnamese troops.

Now the Vo brothers share an apartment in the Bronx. On weekends, they rejoin their families — Huynh has six kids, Suu four — at the small Vietnamese colony where their families live in Annapolis, Md.

A sad ending? No. A fresh start for the brothers. They've just begun working again for NBC here. Vo Huynh as an assistant cameraman, Vo Suu as a soundman, covering the stories of life in peacetime America.

They say they prefer that their families live in Annapolis because costs are lower, the pace far slower than New York, and most importantly, life among their own people cushions their adjustment to American ways.

While not ideal, it's the best compromise, according to the brothers, whom I first met and came to know while on assignment in Vietnam in 1960. Both were NBC cameramen then.

Huynh, 44, a laconic, pipe-smoking man, was regarded by many newsmen covering the war as one of the best, coolest and smartest newsmen in the business, and the people who give awards agreed.

In 1966, he won an Emmy for his work on a combat documentary, "Same Mud, Same Blood," and later won a George Polk Memorial award for his filming of a battle reported by Ron Nessen, now chief White House spokesman.

Suu, 38, also was well-regarded by his colleagues, but wasn't as well-known, perhaps because Vo Huynh's reputation overshadowed him.

But among other things, he was the sole network cameraman to film one of the war's most shocking moments — the summary execution of a Viet Cong prisoner by Brig. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, South Vietnam's national police chief, during the bloody Tet offensive of 1968.

The brothers, whose parents still live in North Vietnam, say they fled south with some 40 relatives in 1964 when Vietnam was partitioned at the end of the French Indochina war.

They said they left South Vietnam last April because they felt the communists would seek them out and jail them — or kill them — for having worked for an American organization.

Huynh, who doesn't lack for gifts, as anyone familiar with his close-up combat footage will agree, said he'd wanted to leave Vietnam "a long, long time ago" but not because he wanted a safer assignment.

He said he'd felt, even during the massive U.S. military effort in Vietnam, that "even if they did have a coalition government the Viet Cong would control it in several years. I knew I had to leave."

"I wanted to stay," Suu said. "But finally I had to leave. We understand the communists' a lot. We cannot live with them."

The brothers, both of whom speak excellent English, were asked how they're getting along in New York, now. Vo Huynh, who visited here in 1967, said the city's noise, bustle and life didn't faze him.

Vo Suu, a newcomer, said he was slowly getting used to it. "Our first two days here, we had an empty apartment. We had to go out and buy everything, from a toothpick to pots and pans. But it'll be all right."

"I think in time it'll work out."

Senate, House Okay Oil Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to require the federal government to store millions of barrels of oil while the House has voted to open up the Navy's petroleum reserves to rapid development.

The bill passed by the Senate on Tuesday is designed to protect against a future oil embargo. The House-passed legislation is aimed at cutting American oil imports.

Both bills were approved overwhelmingly. The Senate bill was approved 91 to 0 and the House bill was approved 391 to 20.

Hydrofoil May Help Cities Bypass Rush-Hour Traffic

By BRUCE DUNFORD
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — When it's sitting at the dock, the 90-foot 112-ton vessel looks like just another ungainly double-deck harbor cruise boat. But when its twin gas turbine waterjet engines begin sucking up and expelling 220 tons of seawater per minute, the hull rises smoothly and the craft quickly accelerates to nearly 50 miles an hour, only knife-like steel struts slicing the water.

This is the Seafite Jetfoil, billed as the nation's first commercial hydrofoil and an eventual answer to commuters' dreams in many cities.

The first of three Jetfoils built by the Boeing Aerospace Co. for Seafite was tested here for several weeks and began passenger service in mid-June with less than capacity crowds aboard.

The craft makes daily runs to neighboring islands, competing with established airline service. But the Jetfoil is being watched closely for its potential on shorter commuter runs.

Its designers talk of pleasant, smooth commuter service from Great Neck to Manhattan in 18 minutes, San Francisco to the San Francisco Airport in 38 minutes and Bremerton to Seattle in 21 minutes.

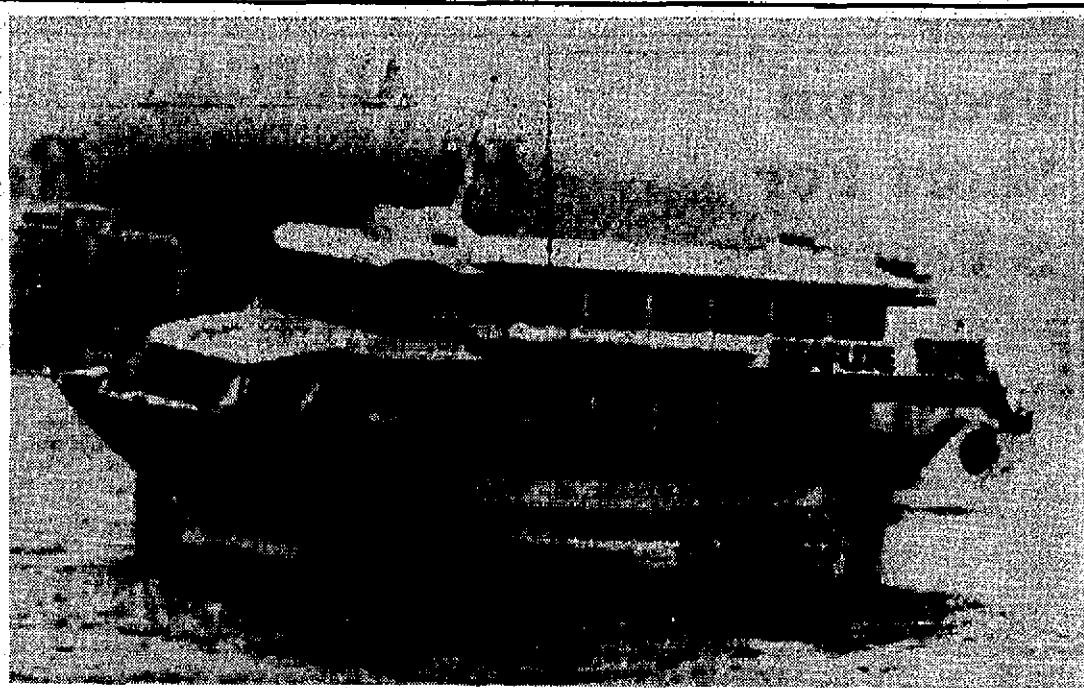

Hawaii officials including the governor have ridden the Jetfoil and are looking at the possibility of buying and subsidizing the 250-passenger craft to cut the traffic jams between Honolulu and its seaside suburbs.

"It does have a jiggle, joggle," says a Seafite technical adviser, Justus Muller. "It's like a ride on a train back in the days when there was such a thing as a good train ride."

To many who look demonstration rides here the Jetfoil also suggested a plane, and in fact there are marked similarities.

The submerged hydrofoil beneath the struts is like the wing of an airplane, and the 3,000-horsepower engines do essentially the same thing with water that a jet aircraft engine does with air.

Passengers sit in a two-level air-conditioned cabin complete with airline-style seats, fold-down trays and attendants to

Saginaw Man Fights Seeing-Eye Agencies

By JOHN PURAYS
SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Tom Ryan doesn't do much with his rose garden any more. But he still cultivates thorns — the kind that end up in somebody's side.

Most of the jabs are aimed at people who try to be too protective of blind people, and Thomas J. Ryan, blind since 1963, has singled out a couple of unusual targets.

One is the famed Leader Dogs for the Blind training center in Rochester. The other is the National Accreditation Council for agencies serving the blind, in New York.

The Leader Dogs people drew Ryan's prickly wrath when they scoffed at a proposal to improve visibility of guide dogs.

TOP 5 PER CENT: Fourth classman, Randy Brit Breunling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Breunling, St. Joseph, recently completed first year at the U.S. Air Force academy, Colorado Springs, Colo. He was named to the commandant's, superintendent's and dean's lists indicating an academic standing in the top five per cent of his class. Breunling also received honors in chemistry. He is undergoing summer training at the academy in soaring, parachute and survival training.

"Ridiculous," snorted Harold L. Pocklington, executive director of Leader Dogs for the Blind, when he found out about a bill calling for bright orange markings on dog harnesses.

That was a mistake as far as Ryan was concerned.

Ryan suggested the markings. State Reps. Robert Young of Saginaw and Loren Armbruster of Caro introduced the legislation last year.

An aide to Young reported Pocklington's opposition has stalled the measure. So Ryan says he'll expand his work to a national level, and ask U.S. Rep. J. Bob Traxler, D-Bay City, for help.

As for the accreditation group, it drew Ryan's wrath by demanding teachers of mobility, or cane walking, for the blind possess perfect vision themselves.

Ryan says that sounds like discrimination to him, and loss of sight had made his hearing acute.

He persuaded U.S. Rep. Elford A. Cederberg, R-Mich., to ask denial of a tax exemption to any charitable organization discriminating against the blind.

Cederberg introduced the bill last year. It didn't go anywhere, so he reintroduced it last January.

An aide said the measure is part of a pending package of tax legislation before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Ryan, 46, is a native of Saginaw, and used to be in the appliance business. He doesn't have anything against the council and the Leader Dog school as such.

But he resents any attempt to make blind people less than full individuals.

Blind persons can teach cane travel to other blind persons without needing accreditation to do it, says Ryan.

Although Ryan uses a cane, not a dog, the accreditation issue isn't his main concern these days. It's the dog-visibility bill and the Leader Dog organization's disdain for it.

In January 1974, a blind man with a seeing eye dog was crossing a street in Saginaw when a car struck them, killing the dog and leaving the man with a broken hip and broken leg.

The driver said she saw neither man nor dog.

"If this dog had been marked, it might have been detected," Ryan said.

His bill calls for "display of a day-glo orange material on the guide dog. The material shall be displayed in such a manner as to be visible to an approaching pedestrian or vehicle."

Only this spring did Ryan hear hints of why the bill was stagnating in the legislature.

A check with Young's office confirmed Ryan's fears.

"We're holding it in abeyance because of objections from the Leader Dog school," an aide reported.

A letter from Pocklington to Harold Payne, state director of services for the blind, offers the Leader Dog school's rationale:

"Actually they prefer not to be identified any more, than necessary, at least that is our understanding."

"We positively do not want to put any decorations on Leader Dog harnesses... We do not expect traffic to look out for the dogs."

"Our people using Leader Dogs feel they look more like a person out walking a dog. Certainly a natural leather covered harness is more attractive than one decorated."

Ryan noted, however, that his cane identifies him as blind — that this is one purpose of it.

"I'm not ashamed of it," he declared. "It's not ridiculous, not a bit. I'm trying to do something that will protect not only the blind but also the driver."

"It's not a decoration, it's a safety factor, a protection for both blind and sighted people. If they want to eliminate the driver from seeing the dog, their heads should be examined."

Ryan called the Leader Dog stand a contradiction of "the whole philosophy of protection of the blind. I'm not ashamed of a cane, and neither should a blind person be ashamed of a colored harness."

If the Seafite Jetfoils negotiate the rough channels between Hawaiian islands regularly and safely, hydrofoil advocates will have evidence that the vessels would be reliable for commuter or tourist use elsewhere. But observers will be watching Seafite for economic indicators as well.

Seafite paid about $5 million each for the three Jetfoils and believes it can break even with an average of about 100 passengers per trip. A 2½-hour trip to Maui will cost $20, the same as a 20-minute jet flight to the same island. How many people want to spend hours instead of minutes getting from one island to another is unknown.

A Seafite spokesman says: "We think there definitely is a market for a pleasant and scenic boat trip between the islands."

Two More Deputies Fired

ROGERS CITY, Mich. (AP) — The sheriff of Presque Isle County has fired two more deputies for testifying against him in court. Fired Monday were Sgt. Garnet Robinson and Deputy Carl Daniels. They were released for testifying against Sheriff Henry Clendenin on June 27 at his trial in Rogers City. The sheriff said he fired the deputies for violating rules barring disclosure of internal matters. He gave the same reason last week when he released two other members of his staff. A jury found Clendenin guilty of larceny but innocent of embezzlement in a case centering on alleged misuse of county funds.

Freedom Short For 3 Escapees

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Three men accused of violent crimes scaled a 12-foot barbed wire-topped fence in an early morning escape from the Center for Forensic Psychiatry at Ypsilanti State Hospital, but within hours were back in custody.

ANTHONY BURNS
Escapee recaptured

One of the three, 26-year-old Anthony Burns of Benton Harbor, was captured at a service station near the institution after about two hours of freedom, officials said.

The other two, identified by officials as Jesse Lee Bragg, 17, and Robert L. Williams, 21, both of Detroit, returned voluntarily to the institution, State Police said.

Burns was awaiting psychiatric evaluation to determine fitness to stand trial on two armed robbery charges, authorities said.

Williams had been confined for psychiatric evaluation on three counts of assault with intent to murder and two armed robbery charges while Bragg was pending evaluation on charges of armed robbery, felonious assault and sodomy, according to officials.

The trio escaped about 4:15 a.m., troopers said. It was believed the three removed a window from their room, cut a hole in a screen to get off a porch and then climbed over the fence.

The fence was installed as an extra security measure at the Forensic Center following last year's escape of eleven mental patients.

Tiny Tot Run Over By Father

SOUTH HAVEN — Four-month-old Richard Dugas Jr., was listed in serious condition today at a Kalamazoo hospital for injuries suffered yesterday when he was run over by a car driven by his father.

State police from the South Haven post said the accident occurred at the George Latchaw orchard, 100th avenue, Casco township in Allegan county, at approximately 1:30 p.m.

The child's father, Richard Dugas Sr., 26, route 1, South Haven, told police he had placed his son on a blanket beside the car while he picked cherries. Dugas said that when he returned he moved the car forgetting the baby was along side it.

Police said the right front tire rolled over the infant. The boy was treated at South Haven Community hospital and transferred to the intensive care unit at Borgess hospital, Kalamazoo. The accident remains under investigation.

Witness Says Man Washed Off Pier

SAUGATUCK — A search continued today for an 18-year-old Allegan county man believed drowned when washed off the south pier here late yesterday afternoon by high waves, according to Allegan county sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said Paul David Laniols, route 2, Door, was fishing from the south pier, when a witness said high waves in excess of 10 feet, washed him off the pier about 4:45 p.m.

Deputies said the witness couldn't get to Laniols and ran back to the beach area and called police. By the time police arrived at the scene, Laniols could not be seen.

Police said the witness saw

Lagging Steel

Output Cuts

Lakes Shipping

DETROIT (AP) — Lagging steel production was blamed today for a sharp drop in the number of ore carriers plying the Detroit River.

A recent spot check showed 45 vessels passed, compared with the normal 80-plus, in a 24-hour period.

Indicating the severity of the drop in ore output, the survey showed 24 U.S.-flag Great Lakes vessels never were taken out of winter layup and outfitted for the new season. Similarly, 16 Canadian flagships are still in layup.

Laniols park his car before walking on the pier to go fishing. Laniols' parents were contacted and they identified the fishing equipment on the pier as that of their son's.

Allegan sheriff's deputies said Lake Michigan was too rough yesterday to begin dragging operations, but a Coast Guard boat and helicopter were called in, but were unable to locate the body.

car during the evening of the 18th.

—Cross was "running his route" (picking up insurance premiums) and doing his books during the evening until Langford picked him up about midnight.

—Langford and Cross went to the Office Lounge in Benton Harbor about 12:30 a.m., and while there purchased a drink for an off-duty Benton Harbor police officer. (The officer, Phil Harris, previously testified Langford wanted to buy him a drink at the Office Lounge.)

—While at the tavern, Langford told Cross he "had to leave town because he (Langford) was in some kind of terrible trouble."

—Cross the next day gave Langford $75, claiming the money was "wages Terry had earned" from working at a car wash for Cross.

A number of witnesses during the trial have testified they saw Cross with Mrs. Walker at Smoke's lounge during the evening of Feb. 18 (the night of the murder), and Karsen said he asked Cross about that during the interview.

"I believe he said something to the effect that if he wasn't in there Monday night (the 17th) it must have been Tuesday night," Karsen testified.

Asked about Cross' statement that Langford said he (Langford) "had killed that bitch," Karsen said people he had talked to indicated Langford had made threats to kill Mrs. Walker a number of times when he (Langford) was angry.

Karsen recounted that Cross told him he and Langford had been in Benton Harbor on Feb. 18, which the sisters confirmed when they testified yesterday.

Patsy Nesbitt, of 630-634 Pearl street, who had dated Langford, testified that Cross and Langford were at her residence between 7 and 8 p.m. Feb. 18, and then Cross and Langford left in Cross' car. She said she again saw Langford about midnight when he picked her up, and then the couple picked up Cross, she testified.

She said Cross told her on Feb. 19 that "Terry had to take

ALLEGAN COUNTY BUILDING Plans Are Ready For Bids

ALLEGAN — Allegan county commissioners yesterday approved final plans for remodeling the county building and county jail, here, and will seek bids for the work immediately.

According to Nick Lam, deputy county clerk, the plans call for general remodeling of the county building including installation of central air conditioning; plus remodeling of the county jail including construction of a garage addition, storage room and rehabilitation room.

The board of commissioners will seek three separate bids for the work on the county building, jail, and installation of central air conditioning for the county building, Lam said. The board hopes to get the bids back by Aug. 12. A total of $348,886 in present federal revenue sharing money has been allotted for the work, and an estimated $200,000 from the next revenue sharing installment will be spent for installation of the central air conditioning.

In other areas, the board of commissioners voted to hire a part-time person to assist the Friend of the Court, at a rate of $2.02 per hour.

The following persons were elected to terms on the county mental health board: Nellie Morris, Claire Sheever, Edward Barton and Dr. Westendorp, three-year terms; Ralph Senese, Vernon Sill, Anthony Wykstra, Leslie Haase, two-year terms; Carl Wicks, Shirley Lubbers, Cleon Duryea, and Clare Sterner, one-year terms.

Appointed to the newly created appeal board for county building code construction and enforcement were: Ken Hackman and Maynard Hackman, Allegan; William Vogelzang, Holland; Kenneth Dolks, Hamilton; and Donald Mason, Plainwell.

St. Joe Teacher Firing Confirmed: Appeal Expected

St. Joseph board of education yesterday confirmed its decision of June 13 to dismiss physical education instructor Bernadine Salvadore.

Five members of the board voted to approve a brief motion read by trustee John Pielmeier. It was supported by James Mason.

The board reaffirmed its firing of Mrs. Salvadore after an investigation by the Michigan Education Association. Jack York, regional MEA executive director at Berrien Springs, told this newspaper this morning that an appeal of the board's decision is expected to be filed in Mrs. Salvadore's behalf.

York said there are several matters in the case the MEA believes are basis for an appeal. He did not identify the points in contention. He said information has been turned over to MEA attorneys who would represent Mrs. Salvadore in an appeal.

The board of education's motion stated: "The board of education, having found just and reasonable cause on June 13, 1975, to terminate the services of Mrs. Salvadore, and having rendered a decision pursuant to the teacher tenure act to dismiss her from her teaching position on that date, hereby confirms that decision."

The five trustees voting for the motion were President Ray Dumke, Vice President James Mason, Secretary Linda Griswold and Trustees Freda Sparks and Pielmeier. Mrs. Beverly Linn was not present. Dr. Joseph Naines, who was elected to the board last June 9 over William Glines, was present but did not vote.

The board met with Atty. Thomas Fette of St. Joseph in an executive session for over an hour before opening the meeting to pass the final motion. Atty. Fette disclosed earlier he planned to meet with the board to outline the procedure of what will happen if Mrs. Salvadore appeals.

Also present at the meeting yesterday was J. Alea Garman, regional executive director of the Michigan Education Association (MEA). If an appeal either to the state tenure commission or to the courts is filed, the MEA would represent Mrs. Salvadore, the MEA aide said. Mrs. Salvadore was represented by Atty. Michael Cook at the public hearings May 21 and June 2.

The dismissal decision followed two public hearings in which the board of education served as judge and jury.

Charges originally were placed against Mrs. Salvadore by Richard Higgs, high school principal. She was charged with failure to uphold professional responsibilities, tardiness and abuse of a personal business leave request.

Cass Office Shift Nearing Completion

CASSOPOLIS — Cass county board of commissioners was told yesterday that the moving of county offices from the courthouse into a new addition should be complete in 10 days.

Commissioner Charles Sarabyn, Dowagiac, chairman of the committee overseeing the building program, said offices moving onto the first floor had just completed the switch with one exception. Offices moved included the register of deeds, planning commission, equalization, tax description, drain commissioner, clerk and treasurer. Yet to be moved is the county board meeting room.

Probate and circuit courts and their offices are to be moving into the second level shortly. Sarabyn told the commission the moves had not gone as smoothly as expected, but that they had been done.

Mrs. Helen Foust, register of deeds, reported that the elevator had stopped between floors while a man was inside, but that he had managed to bring it to the lower level, avoiding a major problem. The elevator was still out of order at noon yesterday.

The addition was begun late last year to provide room for the courts in the existing courthouse. Once the existing structure is remodeled, the courts will be relocated back into it.

The project is costing

$1,206,273 and is being financed from existing county funds and federal revenue sharing income.

In other areas, the board referred to its social services committee questions from Orion Flowers, of the Tri-County council on child development, on the status of the Neighborhood Youth corps (NYC) program in the county this year. The Tri-County council is overseeing the program in Cass, Berrien and Van Buren counties this year. According to a board spokesman, the NYC and another federally-funded program, known as SPEEDY, are providing jobs for 110 youths in the county this summer.

As required because of a change in state law, members of the county mental health board were, with one exception, reappointed for terms running through 1977. The exception involved appointment of Charles Ritter in place of Earl Clark. The change was made, according to the board, because Mrs. Clark was also a member. Other members are Rev. Allen Wilderquist, Mrs. Alex Federowski, Mrs. Lucy Spaulding, Mrs. Winifred Guinan, Herman Saitz, Dr. Thomas Rea, Mrs. Lucille Duck, Burke Webb, Mrs. Ruth Larson and Mrs. Ruth Sarabyn.

The board approved employment by the health department of a registered sanitarian for $12,500.

Dehumidifiers for vaults in the offices of treasurer, register of deeds and clerk were ordered purchased.

The board earmarked $1,500 to pay part-time help for moving county offices.

Purchase of three squad cars for the sheriff's department from Hartman Chevrolet Sales Inc., Cassopolis, was approved. The firm's bid of $12,000 was lowest received.

STATE WELFARE DEPARTMENT Calls Tapped For 'Training'

By PETE VOST
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP)—The state Social Services Department has eavesdropped on thousands of phone calls for more than two years and may soon double the number of phones it monitors.

State Social Services Director John T. Dempsey said Tuesday the monitoring of about 100 phones is solely for "employee training purposes" in two programs at his agency.

Dempsey said he would oppose expanding telephone monitoring to welfare clients or other programs. But the phone monitoring equipment may be expanded and centralized in Lansing to cover 200 telephones in the same two programs, he said.

Gov. William Milliken is expected to ask heads of all 18 state departments for reports on whether supervisors are monitoring conversations of their employees, said Peter Ellsworth, the governor's assistant legal counsel.

Phone monitoring by Social Services now takes place at five locations — two in Lansing and one each in Pontiac, Grand Rapids and Detroit, officials said.

One unit eavesdrops on calls which about 100 employees receive from county social service workers seeking information about welfare clients from a computer, said Earl Thornton, head of communications at the social services department.

Thornton, a former Michigan Bell Telephone Co. marketing official, said he gave the go-ahead for the program more than two years ago. He said the computer operators knew about the monitoring but not the county welfare workers.

He said another department official, William Davis, earlier was instrumental in setting up a phone monitoring system for the Medical Program. Doctors seeking help filling out forms for Medicare reimbursement call social services employees for help, but the doctors don't know they are being monitored, said Thornton. The department employees are informed they may be monitored, he said.

About a dozen social services department officials monitor the calls. In some cases, they are in the same room as the monitored employees. In other cases, they are in a nearby room, said Thornton.

Thornton described the monitor as a teaching device to determine if workers are responding correctly to queries from physicians and county social workers. Thornton emphasized the system has never been used to detect welfare fraud.

The possibility of monitoring conversations between welfare caseworkers and their clients has been considered informally at the agency, but never implemented, said Thornton.

Dempsey, who is still gathering data about phone monitoring at his agency, said he was unaware of the practice when he took over as director early this year. Existence of the monitoring equipment was first revealed last week by state Sen. Dale Kildee, D-Flint.

"The governor is emphatic that both parties to the conversation should know someone else is listening," said George Weeks, the governor's executive secretary. Weeks said procedures are being established to see that both parties are alerted.

The calls "are not recorded, never have been and never will be," said Thornton.

Chrysler's 'New Team' Now In Driver's Seat

DETROIT (AP) — A new management team hand-picked by the outgoing chairman has taken the helm of Chrysler Corp. with promises to steer the troubled auto company toward financial health.

"We're realistic about our problems, but we're also very confident about the future at Chrysler," Chairman-designate John J. Riccardo said Tuesday.

"We're very encouraged by what we see in the marketplace and expect solid growth and considerable improvements in sales."

Riccardo, 51, company president since 1970, succeeds 56-year-old Lynn A. Townsend, who is taking early retirement on Oct. 1 after nearly nine years as Chrysler's chief executive.

Riccardo will be succeeded as president by executive vice president Eugene A. Cafero, 49, now the firm's No. 3 man.

The new management team was approved Tuesday at a special meeting of the firm's board of directors in New York.

At the same time, the board accepted the retirement of Townsend, who has come under fire because of the firm's dwindling sales and heavy losses — $178 million since last summer.

Riccardo, a Townsend protégé who becomes the sixth chairman in Chrysler's 50-year history, told reporters at a Detroit news conference that cost-cutting policies initiated by Townsend are pulling the company out of the red.

He said there would be no immediate or sharp departure from the course set by his predecessor.

"At the present time, the plans in progress have come about jointly. There may be new decisions in the future as market conditions change."

In 14 years first as president and later as chairman, Townsend transformed Chrysler from a struggling $2 billion company with only 8 per cent of the auto market to an $11 billion-a-year multi-national with a 15 per cent market share. He shocked the industry last Thursday when he announced his plans to retire.

Townsend said Tuesday he made the decision on his own. "There was absolutely no pressure to retire from anywhere," he declared.

"It would be wrong for Chrysler to stretch my career to 65. That would be nearly a quarter of a century," he said. "A corporation this size should not be dominated by one man for so long."

Townsend said he would have preferred to retire while the company was profitable. Instead, the firm is expected to report more heavy losses until the fall.

But he said the auto industry is "entering a new era requiring drastic changes" and requires decisions now that will affect the business for a long time to come.

"I couldn't expect to be around to see those changes," he said. "The new team is ready, the company's fortunes are improving steadily and we'll all have brighter days ahead."

BALTIMORE (AP) — A person cannot sell his father's cremated remains at public auction in Maryland since a person's body is not part of his estate, the state attorney general has ruled.

Atty. Gen. Francis B. Burch said in an opinion issued Tuesday that an auctioneer sought his help last month when a woman insisted on including her father's ashes among the items to be sold.

Consumers Facing Higher Sugar Price

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Rising prices for raw sugar may mean consumers will pay more for the sweetener they stir in their iced tea and sprinkle on their fruit this summer. But the experts do not anticipate anything like last year's sharp increase.

Two major refiners said Monday that they were boosting their charges for grocery sugar — the kind they sell to supermarkets. It was the first increase since last November and followed 15 price decreases.

The move put the wholesale price of sugar at about 26 cents a pound or $1.30 for a five-pound sack. The amount and timing of any increase at the retail level depends on several factors, including the amount of lower-priced sugar the stores have in stock and whether they are willing to risk the wrath of consumers who boycotted sugar last fall when prices skyrocketed.

The refiners said the price they pay for sugar had gone up, although it remained well below what it was a year ago. The price of raw cane sugar on the New York market was 17 cents a pound at the start of this week, up three-fourths of a cent from the end of last week.

A year ago, the same sugar sold for 26 cents a pound and by the start of last November, prices had gone up to 60 or so cents a pound.

Fred Gray of the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture said Tuesday he did not think the new increase was the start of another price spiral.

"The price might go up some, but it would seem to be temporary," he said.

Gray said one factor in the increase might be recent rains in the upper Midwest which hurt the sugar beet crop. But he said he did not expect the kind of world-wide shortage that there was last year.

"Based on available supplies, there is no reason for the price to go up that high," Gray said, referring to last year's increases.

He warned, however, that if people in the sugar industry believe there might be a shortage — whether real or imagined — the price could jump temporarily.

A spokesman for the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange said, "I don't think we're confronted with the same situation we were last year, but it all depends on the weather. The supply this year seems to be greater than last year, but it's hard to say at this point."

The spokesman said that demand for sugar — which decreased when prices rose to over $3 for a five-pound sack — is strong in the summer and "it's being reflected in the price."

He said a combination of several different factors caused last year's sugar shortages, including bad weather in many sugar producing areas and some government controls. Those factors are not present this year, he said.

An Associated Press market-basket survey of one supermarket in each of 13 cities found that sugar prices at the retail level continued to decline during June. The price dropped at the checklist store in 12 of the cities checked; the specified size of sugar was not available at the 13th store. Prices generally were about $1.30 for five pounds of granulated sugar, the lowest level since early last year.

New Home Sales Continue To Lag

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the appeal of a $2,000 tax credit, new home sales still are insufficient to bring about a major reduction in the nation's big backlog of unsold homes, a government agency says.

As a result, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board concludes that any real boom in construction of either single-family housing or multi-family dwellings "is a long way off."

The board said Tuesday the tax credit that took effect in late March appears to have had a weak impact on the inventory of unsold homes, in part because new housing starts are relatively high compared to sales.

The board said sales increased 11,000 in April compared to March but the inventory of unsold single-family homes declined only 7,000 units to a total of 380,000 homes in April, the month the program should have had its greatest impact, it said.

An analyst for the board, which regulates savings and loan associations, said the April backlog of homes was equal to about 8.1 months of sales. That was a high figure, although an improvement from previous months, he said. Figures for May were not yet available, although new housing starts in that month increased 14.2 per cent over April's total.

The sales situation for multi-family dwellings, such as condominiums, is even worse, he said.

Congress enacted the $2,000 tax credit in March — as part of the 1973 tax reduction program — at the urging of Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La. The purpose was to help home builders unload their huge backlog of homes and to get the depressed housing industry back on its feet.

In its simplest terms, the credit is equal to 5 per cent of the purchase price of a new home, with a maximum credit of $2,000. To qualify, a home must have been under construction before March 28 of this year, and the purchase must be made between March 12 and Dec. 31.

Homebuyers can take the credit by deducting it, next spring from their 1975 tax bill.

Although new home sales increased by 11,000 in April to a total of 55,000, the analyst said it was impossible to say how many buyers were taking advantage of the tax credit provision. He said it is likely most of these people planned to buy new homes within the next year anyway and simply advanced the timing of their purchase.

But the board said in a monthly report that "if we extrapolate the April sales rates to subsequent months, this does not indicate a sales rate that would bring about a really sharp reduction in the inventory of unsold homes nationally."

A new law enacted last week is designed to spur construction of 300,000 new homes in the next year.

Kissinger Off On 4-Day Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is setting out on a four-day visit to Europe designed to promote a Sinai settlement between Israel and Egypt and to spur nuclear weapons negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Kissinger will discuss both subjects with Soviet Foreign Minister Andre A. Gromyko in Geneva on Thursday and Friday after stopping tonight in Paris for talks with French officials on the currently stymied dialog between oil consumers and producers.

He will then pursue the Middle East situation with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Saturday in Bonn, the West German capital. Negotiations, through Kissinger, with Egypt appear to be reaching a critical stage.

Rabin and State Department officials dismissed reports Tuesday that agreement already has been reached on an interim settlement. Israel has been seeking "clarifications" of what it could expect in return for the Gidi and Mitta mountain passes and the Abu Rudeis oil field demanded by Egypt.

The Israelis are holding out for control of the eastern slope of the passes and are concerned about the electronic surveillance system that protects them against a surprise Egyptian tank attack.

Egypt's apparent willingness to sign a pact of at least three years' duration supports hope of an agreement, however.

In preparation for the trip Kissinger met for two hours Monday night with Israeli ambassador Simcha Dinitz and then for 45 minutes at the White House Tuesday with Soviet ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said Egypt would be "immediately and closely informed of continuing diplomatic exchanges we are having with Israel."

DEAFNESS HEARING
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A public hearing on vocational rehabilitation for the deaf will be held in Flint on July 16 and 17, state education officials said Tuesday. Fifteen people will speak at the Michigan School for the Deaf forum designed to aid state services for Michigan's 65,000 deaf citizens, the state Board of Education said.

Ghost Hunter Peers Into 'Other World'

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Before a yawning fireplace in the basement kitchen of Staten Island's historic Conference House, hands fluttered over a Ouija board as dusk turned to night.

With light provided by a single bare bulb, Stanley Wojcik tried Tuesday to reach what he calls an "other worldly" presence felt on a prior visit.

It's a living, the 65-year-old Cheesapeake, N.J., man said privately. A self-styled ghost hunter, writer and lecturer, Wojcik added, "I do that and nothing else."

Alexander Wilke, president of the Conference House Association, said he couldn't vouch for the authenticity of the spiritual goings-on. But the place where Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Edward Rutledge turned down a British peace proposal in 1776 needed the attention, he continued.

Wojcik began: "We don't know what we'll get here tonight ... but I'm confident we'll get something."

Sure enough, the marker on the Ouija board slid beneath his fingers, landing on letters that Wojcik said spelled out the answers to his questions.

After reporting that he talked to his long-dead mother through the board, Wojcik proceeded to tell the tale of a "Billy," who the medium quoted as saying died tragically in the old fieldstone house.

Billy wouldn't say how he died, however, so Wojcik chided him. Then he tuned in an old friend, as it were, one he said he had contacted previously.

"Again, we're calling for Sam Lambertson," he said. Slipping and sliding beneath Wojcik's fingers in obliging reply, the Ouija marker rasped across the board as Wojcik called out the letters: "S-A-M L-A-M-B —"

Thanks to Sam, a fellow named Tom Duval and Billy himself, the more than 30 individuals who gathered for the Ouija session were told by Wojcik that the boy had been bitten by rats, wracked by a fever and hidden in a small room for fear soldiers would kill him to stop the plague.

"Is there a small room here?" Wojcik asked the assemblage. Sure enough, there is, on the third floor. So Wojcik was prompted to ask the Ouija board which floor: "Sure enough, the third floor."

Wojcik then asked the spirits if they had anything to say. Loquacious as ever, one "said" through the board that the boy was unhappy. Wojcik agreed: "This has all the aspects of a haunted child, an unhappy spirit."

According to Wojcik's reading of the board, this is why the lad's spirit lingers: N-O-B-U-R-I-A-L.

To those who already trusted in the Ouija board, the hour session was confirmation of their beliefs. To skeptics, it was mere entertainment.

But Wojcik said he didn't much care.

"We don't attempt to force people to believe what they don't want to," he declared, implying that it was their loss.

$176,698 Contract Award Continues Growth At LMC

By NICK SMITH
Staff Writer

Lake Michigan college trustees last night awarded a $176,698 contract to low bidder Holland Construction Company, St. Joseph, for construction on Phase III which is a continuation of the building program for the Napier avenue campus.

sion that half of the cost of Phase III construction will be paid for by matching state funds set aside specifically for the completion of the campus.

The contract calls for the development of a radio laboratory, an increase in ventilating facilities in the welding shop to meet OSHA safety standards, improving the acoustical quality of the music rehearsal room, an upgrading of kitchen facilities and walling a now open-air terrace.

Because of matching funds all of the work will cost LMC a maximum of $100,000, Niemi said.

Also bidding for the work was Pearson Construction Company, Benton Harbor, which estimated a cost of $188,100.

Trustees also voted to make an additional $12,300 available to Holland if work done under terms of the base bid does not succeed in improving the noise problem in the rehearsal room.

LMC Architect Gerald McElvahn explained that machinery in an adjacent "mechanical room" will be insulated and, if the noise problem is still present, ducting in the ceiling of the rehearsal room will be insulated with the additional funds.

Counting base bid and the possible duct work, trustees approved $188,998 to Holland. That work Pearson bid $206,100.

Much of the construction work will be completed by September, McElvahn said earlier. Also last night trustees approved the expenditure of $14,000 to make facilities more manageable for the handicapped, and approved a $11,010 contract with Andrews university, which will conduct a survey and recommend goals and objectives for LMC to follow.

Dr. Creal, vice president for instruction, told the board last night: "I am proud to have been a part of the team which has made Lake Michigan college an outstanding institution." On Aug. 1 he becomes president at Prairie State college, about 20 miles south of Chicago.

On another matter, trustees agreed to accept bids at a later meeting on work which will make it easier for students with handicaps to move about the campus. The college will spend $14,000 and will receive $56,000 in a grant for the work.

Curbs will be cut to benefit those in wheelchairs, ramps will be constructed near stairways and washroom facilities will be modified, explained Executive Vice President Walter Browe.

Following a presentation by JoAnn Johnston, coordinator of the school's Dental Assistant program, the board approved a fee schedule to be used at the new dental clinic.

Next meeting will be July 28 at 7:30 p.m. at LMC.

Ox Bow Work To Continue

SODUS — Sodus township board last night agreed to continue improvements to a section of Ox Bow road even though the improvements may cost as much as $3,000 more than the original estimate.

Clerk Carol Cox was instructed to notify the Berrien county road commission to have the commission continue the improvements to 1.4 miles of the road between Pipestone and River roads.

An unforeseen drainage problem was the reason given by the road commission for the cost to exceed the original estimate of $20,000, according to Cox. Road improvement monies come from a matching fund program the township has with the county.

In other areas, the board tabled, for further information, a request by the Central County Senior Citizen Center in Berrien Springs for a donation of $2,500 for its operations.

The board approved the purchase of aerial photographs of the township from county planning department for $50.

GETS SHOW ON ROAD: Comedian Jerry Lewis peeks through microscope at muscle tissue at London's Hammersmith Hospital after opening a muscle research center named after him. Lewis, chairman of the Muscular Dystrophy Association of America, raised $300,000 for the construction of the center, which will provide much-needed accommodations for the research program currently being undertaken at the Royal Postgraduate Medical School at Hammersmith. ## Galien Considers Radio Purchases GALIEN — Galien township board discussed, but took no action, on a proposal to purchase additional portable radio receivers for an emergency communication system for the Galien fire and ambulance departments.

The system, which will go into effect July 15, will alert volunteers to an emergency in the area through a radio broadcast by the Berrien sheriff's department in St. Joseph. The board has already purchased seven radios for the volunteers.

In other areas, the board discussed drawing up a new agreement with the sheriff's department for having a sheriff's substation located in the township fire station. Copies of the original 10-year agreement signed in 1969 were not on file with the sheriff's department, according to Clerk Russell Babcock.

The township furnishes office space and utilities free to sheriff's deputies in the fire station, he added.

Center To Get Oronoko Funds

BERRIEN SPRINGS — Oronoko township board last night approved donating $1,500 to the Central County Senior Citizens center in Berrien Springs to keep it operating.

The money will nearly meet the $1,712 needed by Thursday so that the agency will qualify for quarterly federal funds.

Robert Feather, township supervisor, said, in supporting the donation, that one of the communities served by the agency had to act favorably on the center's bid for local funds so that the program could keep going.

The center is seeking $6,850 from the communities it serves so that it can qualify for $14,000 in federal funds to operate for the new fiscal year.

Monday night, Berrien Springs village council voted to contribute $1,500 if the other communities approved donations also.

In addition to the village and Oronoko township, the communities listed by the center as in its service area were Pipestone, Baroda, Berrien, Sodus and Royalton townships and a part of Lincoln township.

Radioactive Leak Ruled No Hazard

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Radioactive waste that leaked from an underground storage tank on the Hanford Nuclear Reservation poses no hazard to employees or the public, a spokesman says.

A leak of about 5,000 gallons of liquid waste was detected by radiation monitoring equipment around the tank, Hugh Warren, an Atlantic Richfield Hanford Co. vice president, said Tuesday.

Easy-Going Irving Finds Life Good Despite Woes

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer
EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Clifford Irving, "Con Man of the Year" in 1972, strolls barefoot on the lawn overlooking a sunny inlet of this seaside resort. He affectionately nuzzles a pretty German woman friend and says: "Life is good. It always was."

Fine spirits for a man who a few days later declared himself bankrupt and for one still up to his neck in legal proceedings from the 1972 fracas that erupted from his fake autobiography of billionaire Howard Hughes.

After serving 17 months in prison on charges of conspiracy and fraud, Irving, 44, moved here last July. He passes the time playing frenetic daily tennis, dining with friends and dabbles at pure fiction — a new novel he describes as an "erotic romance" about three women and a man living in the Hamptons.

Clad in tennis shorts, Irving stretched his long legs on a tattered hassock in his rented cottage and reminisced about his caper.

"I'm sorry I got caught. And I'm sorry I involved my wife Edith, and I'm sorry I put my children into such jeopardy," said Irving, referring to emotional difficulties he says his young sons, Barnaby and Nedsky, now 5 and 7, experienced when both parents were in jail.

"But I feel better and more experienced for having gone through it all. It was exciting. And there's a certain satisfaction from meeting difficulties, conquering them and coming out relatively whole."

When asked if he saw any parallels between his own futile attempts at a cover-up and Watergate, Irving quickly answered: "None at all. My motives were adventure, literature and money, not necessarily in that order. Their motives were based on the extension of a corrupt government."

He said he's tried to block out the whole experience of prison life, where, by his own estimation, he was a "troublemaker." He said he was placed in solitary confinement a few times and was accused of being the ring leader of a prisoner's strike at Danbury.

"I just don't think of all that ever. Sometimes I wonder where I was in 1973."

But he ruefully admits he's forced to think about the Hughes book all the time.

"The Autobiography of Howard Hughes" with the prefix "Auto" crossed out, was recently published in Spain. But Irving is being sued by Rosemont, a Hughes organization which owns the rights to Hughes' name, to stop publication of the book in the United States.

"It's an ongoing pain," said Irving.

He says he is nevertheless flattered that people on the street still recognize him and indicated a certain sentimental fondness for the book which friends say he is very anxious to see published.

Irving and his fourth wife, Edith, are separated. She lives on the Spanish Island of Ibiza with the two children. He doubts they will bother with divorce since neither wants to marry again. Irving has arranged for a showing of her paintings in Southampton this summer.

He was asked whether he was still in touch with Nina Van Pallandi, the blonde beauty who was instrumental in unraveling the hoax and whose sudden fame launched a short-lived singing and acting career.

"I don't know whatever happened to her, but I hear she came upon a patch of bad luck," he said. "I felt good when I heard that. I think she behaved in very poor taste."

Irving exudes that same cocky air that he mustered right up to the last days of his trial. But he says he was near tears when he heard himself described by the judge as "the biggest loser I know."

His book-about-the-book, "What Really Happened," failed to make money. He says legal fees are eating up whatever resources he has from a few lectures and magazine pieces.

A few days later, his attorneys filed an application for voluntary bankruptcy in Brooklyn Federal Court. They listed his assets at $410. His debts were a bit more — than that: $53,894,348.01 to be exact.

The bulk of that debt, they said, represents a $55 million libel suit pending in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. The suit was filed by Fernand Legros, an artist who was the subject of an earlier and ironically-titled Irving book called "Fake."

His lawyers said Irving also owes a mere $344,899 to McGraw-Hill, who bought the fake Hughes' book. The IRS wants $180,000 in income taxes. Then there's the $192,476 in legal fees.

Has all this turned life sour for Irving?

"It's fruitless to worry about the future," he says. "I have always been easy going and irresponsible and things have always worked out."

IRVING RELAXES: Clifford Irving is embraced by a German woman identified only as Valdi at his home in East Hampton, N.Y., a resort town on Long Island. Irving gained notoriety as author of what he claimed was the autobiography of Howard Hughes. He served 17 months in prison on charges growing out of the book. Now, he says, he is writing an "erotic romance." (AP Wirephoto)

Two Lawmakers Had CIA Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressional overseers of the CIA were told in 1973 about the agency's own findings of improper activities within the intelligence organization, according to newly released CIA documents.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., and Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., were given "a detailed, page-by-page review" of the data collected during the CIA's own probe, a memo by CIA Director William E. Colby said.

The memo, dated Aug. 29, 1973, is part of the CIA's own accounting to President Ford, which was delivered to Ford last Tuesday night. The CIA report acknowledges some domestic misdeeds but contains few major differences from the findings of the Rockefeller Commission.

Meanwhile, it was revealed that Richard M. Nixon, who reportedly refused to testify before the Rockefeller panel, now faces possible questioning by the Senate intelligence committee about assassination plots and other alleged agency wrongdoing.

Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday the committee would contact Nixon's lawyer about testifying.

Colby's report on domestic wrongdoing, which has come to be known as the "Vail Report" because it was delivered to the President while he was on a Christmas skiing vacation in Vail, Colo., outlines essentially the same instances of domestic surveillance documented by the Rockefeller Commission.

The report, consisting of a six-page letter and 58 pages of documents, refers to a May 8, 1973, memo from then-Director James H. Schlesinger to all CIA employees asking them to contact him with any information about official actions outside the agency's charter. The resulting collection of information was shown to Symington and Nedzi, chairmen of the Senate and House intelligence subcommittees.

Nedzi recently has been accused of learning about illegal CIA activities but failing to act on that information. Nedzi has said he was more concerned about the agency's future.

One result is that the planned House intelligence probe is stalled over bickering on whether Nedzi should be removed from the panel that was set up specially to investigate the CIA and other agencies.

The CIA report also referred to two programs not mentioned in the Rockefeller report — recruitment of construction workers as informants during construction in the early 1960s of CIA headquarters at Langley, Va., and infiltration of agents into the former Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, presumably for counter-intelligence purposes.

The Vail report makes no mention of a program described by the Rockefeller Commission in which for a six-month period in 1973 the CIA monitored long-distance telephone calls between the United States and Latin America in an effort to identify narcotics traffickers.

Both reports were prepared for the President in response to allegations published by The New York Times that the CIA had conducted a massive illegal spy campaign against anti-war activists and other dissidents.

Young people are offered swimming 2 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday at both the indoor and outdoor pools. In addition, the outdoor pool is open Saturday and Sunday afternoon, Bergman said.

Adults can swim 12 to 1 p.m. and 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., Monday through Friday at the indoor pool and 4:30 to 6 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday, at the outdoor pool.

Families can swim on Fridays, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., and Saturdays, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the indoor pool and Sundays, from 3 to 6 p.m., at the outdoor pool.

U.S. Trying For S. Viet Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has begun negotiations with an unidentified foreign country to represent American interests in South Vietnam, U.S. officials say.

In disclosing this, the officials outlined a list of problems which they feel are of sufficient importance to warrant the early establishment of a channel of communication in Saigon. They declined to say which country has been chosen for the liaison role.

Israel Faces Agonizing Choice In Quest For Peace

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

For Israel, the time seems to have come for an agonizing choice.

Does Israel, in the phrase of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, "take a chance" on Egypt? Or does she refuse and risk a crisis of relations with her powerful American ally?

The dominant Israeli view is that to accept what Egypt thus far has offered in step-by-step negotiations would be gambling with the nation's security.

Yet, against the security value of the Gidi and Mitla mountain passes in the Sinai Desert, Israel must weigh the consequences for herself if the United States should throw up its hands in futility.

Israel has nowhere else to look. There's little official support from a Europe more worried than the United States about what could happen to Arab oil should there be another Middle East war.

Internal political considerations make the dilemma more painful. The government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, 14 months old, is under heavy pressure, especially from the right, to resist any more concessions to Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

The dilemma began taking shape in March when the Kissinger shuttle diplomacy between Egypt and Israel bogged down. Israel refused to yield the two mountain passes in the occupied Sinai without a clear statement of "non-belligerence from Sadat and a commitment not to use force for a period of five to seven years."

An annoyed Ford administration hinted it felt that Israel should have accepted a package: the passes and the Abu Rudeis oil field, occupied since the 1967 war, in return for an Egyptian promise not to war on Israel for a stated period.

Israel, reluctant to surrender something concrete for an ambiguous promise that could be broken, felt if Sadat wouldn't pledge nonbelligerence he didn't intend peace. But in any case, Israel modified her proposals for an "interim agreement."

In Rabin's words, Israel wouldn't be pushed into a quest for an over-all solution "under pressure of time or the threat of a resort to force." But if Egypt pledged not to use force for three or four years, tone down anti-Israeli propaganda and lift the economic embargo, Israel would pull back to the eastern halves of the passes and provide a corridor for the Egyptians to the oil field. She would expect from the Americans assurance of compensation for Abu Rudeis, which has been supplying half her oil needs.

To guard against surprise attack, Israel would retain her electronic surveillance stations at Gidi.

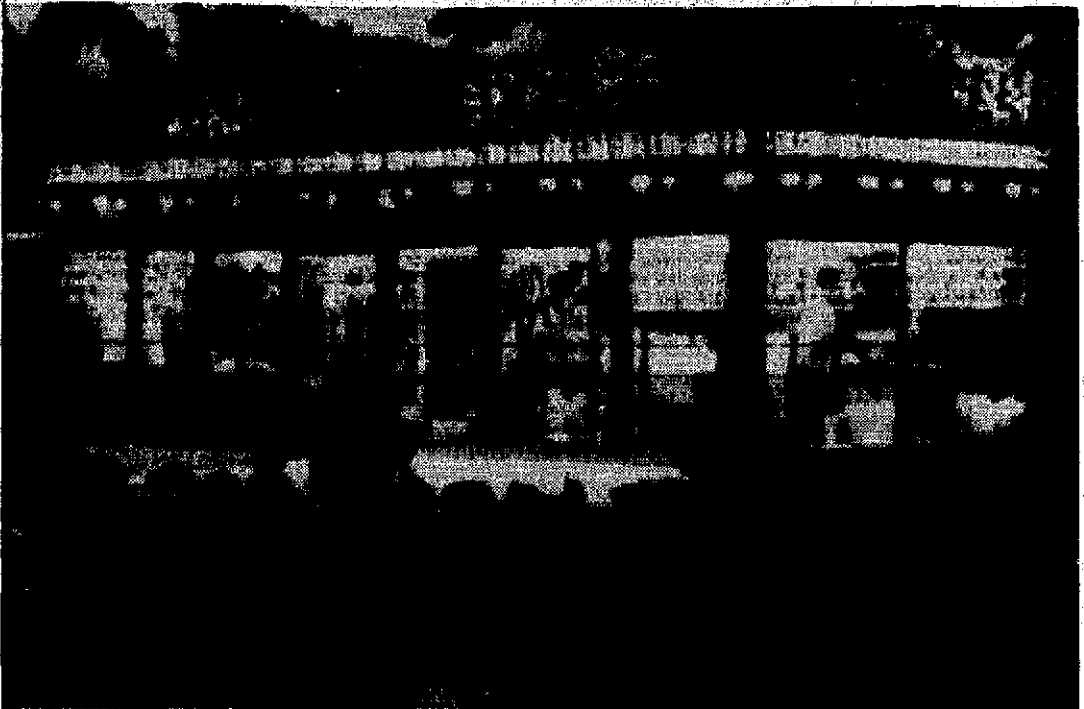

But Egypt still wanted total evacuation of the passes, plus a strip along the Gulf of Suez that would encompass the oilfields and make any other corridor unnecessary.

The Israeli press has complained of an implicit U.S. ultimatum to Israel to break the deadlock. Concern was voiced that the Ford administration has linked Israel's $2.8 billion military-economic aid request to concessions. Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz said Monday, "we have never been told this," but other Israelis obviously feel Kissinger did just that.

THINGS ARE DIFFERENT NOW: For 32 years the Netterfields brought their concession stand from Tampa, Fla., to Robert's Corner in Ypsilanti, Mich., for the summer season. This year was different: Paul Netterfield, didn't make the trip. He died of cancer just a few months ago. (AP Wirephoto)

Popcorn Stand A Spring Landmark On Ypsilanti Corner For 32 Years

By BILL DALTON
YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — The rows of little yellow lights flashed on and off in the early evening dusk. A few moths fluttered around the colorful lighted signs — popcorn, candy apples and peanuts.

Margaret Netterfield handed a cellophane bag of caramel corn through the window to a boy, like she had done thousands of times before. The cash register clanged.

Everything was like it had been for the past 32 years, yet somehow it had all changed.

For 32 years in a row the Netterfield family had made the trip from Tampa, Fla., and parked their concession trailer at "Robert's Corner" in Ypsilanti.

Margaret's husband, Paul, was just passing through the area years ago ready to make the fair and carnival circuit in Michigan when he found the spot. One week there turned into two, then three. Pretty soon it was a way-station for the Netterfields from April until July 4, when the fair season starts.

The old gray and dilapidated house sitting on the corner next to their stand was the "Robert's" house, a stagecoach stop. It's supposed to be about 200 years old. John Dillinger supposedly spent a night there once, but nobody knows for sure.

There used to be a one-room schoolhouse across the street that young "Butch" Netterfield went to between the first and sixth grades. He's watched the house deteriorate over the years. The schoolhouse was torn down a long time ago.

"The house was a real showplace. It was beautiful inside," Butch said, examining the building. Vandals are breaking into it now.

Butch was born in Ypsilanti. His father got his start as a young boy in Fort Wayne, Ind. He'd lost his leg in a railroad accident. There weren't many jobs for him so he sold peanuts on a street corner when he was 8 years old.

He got into a circus but didn't like moving from town to town every day. So he started the concession, working fairs and carnivals. He had to move only once a week then. He did it for nearly 30 years, moving north with the spring, following the seasons.

"I guess the sawdust gets in your shoes, and you look forward to seeing the towns each year," Butch Netterfield said.

He remembers standing on a coke box to serve customers as a boy, and being in at least 10 different schools each year.

"The only advantage to this type of life is that you get to meet lots of different people, and look forward to meeting old friends at the carnivals and fairs each year," he said.

They've never missed a fair.

"Oh, we've had breakdowns and maybe missed one day, but carnival people are like truck drivers. If they see you broken down on the road, they'll stop and help out," Butch said.

Their stay at Robert's Corner

this year is over. They took their concession stand and house trailer and went up to Port Huron after the July 4th weekend.

But this year was different. Paul Netterfield, Butch's father, didn't make the trip this year. It was the first one he'd missed since starting out almost 30 years ago.

He died of cancer just a few months ago.

"It really hurt my mother," Butch recalled. "She'd met him at a fair and worked with him ever since. She's kind of lost interest in staying in the business. It's like she's lost a part of her life."

But he intends to stay in the business and carry on. His wife, Anne, now helps his mother in the popcorn stand.

"I believe my wife likes it better than I do," he said.

Not unlike his parents, he first met her on the road at a fair in Iowa.

"People still remark about how long we've been on this corner. Some have been coming back for 20 years to buy popcorn and caramel corn," Butch said.

Things haven't changed too much over the years, since that first summer Paul Netterfield picked out the corner as a good spot to put his stand. The candy apples and caramel corn are still made with the same old recipe his mother and father used when they started out.

U.S.-Russian Meeting In Orbit To Mark Pause In Space Race

By FRANK CREPEAU
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The mid-July meeting of Americans and Soviets in space will mark a cooperative pause in the intense race that began after the Russians launched the first Sputnik in 1957 with the first Sputnik.

Since the United States won the race to the moon in 1969 and détente replaced cold war catch us."

Eight days later the competitive young president sent a memo to Vice President Lyndon Johnson asking for a survey to find out what the United States could do to beat the Russians. He made clear the United States was engaged in a race for world prestige and that America wanted to win.

In the early days while American rockets failed and the United States played catchup, the Soviet Union went on to new exploits.

The return of cosmonauts from space was an occasion for Red Square meetings with Soviet leaders and speeches proclaiming Soviet superiority.

In 1965, after Alexei Leonov walked in space, his pilot, Pavel Belyaev, recounted, "Soviet exploits and asked: 'Is this not proof of the superiority of the socialist system over the capitalist one, of Soviet science and technology over bourgeois science and technology?'"

Recognizing the Soviet head start, Kennedy had committed the United States to landing a man on the moon before the end of the decade.

The Soviets also talked of the moon with Gagarin predicting in 1962 a trip to the moon "possibly within five years."

When John Glenn became America's first man in space aboard a troubled Friendship 7 in 1962, cosmonaut Gherman Titov commented, "Statements by some U.S. leaders that Americans are sure to outstrip the Russians on flights to the moon are particularly amusing."

Soviet commentators during the period questioned the motives of American astronauts and suggested they were only in the program to make money. Soviet officials and the press also accused the United States of having military aims in space, contrasted to the Soviet Union's "peaceful goals."

It was a heady time for the Soviets — they put up the first two-man Vostok ships, Valentina Tereshkova became the first woman in space, the Soviets flew the first three-man craft, and Leonov became the first man to step out into the void of space.

But America was catching up fast. With the Gemini 5 flight of August, 1965, the Americans surpassed the Soviet record for the longest manned flight and for total man-hours in space.

Within a year and five more Gemini flights, the United States had piled up a wide lead. The United States had 14 manned flights to eight for the Russians, 22 men in space to 11 for the Russians, three times the total Soviet man-hours in space, several space walks to one for the Russians, and seven rendezvous and two dockings to none for the Soviets.

In 1967 there were accidents that set back both Soviet and American programs more than a year. Three astronauts perished in a fire aboard the first Apollo, and three months later Vladimir Komarov was killed in the first flight of the Soyuz spacecraft that crashed.

Somewhere along the line the Soviets dropped out of the race to be first on the moon. And while Americans went to the moon, the Soviets worked on transfers of cosmonauts between spaceships and setting up a manned space laboratory.

One of these manned lab missions is planned to be in progress during the joint U.S.-Soviet flight this month. Two cosmonauts have been aloft in an orbiting Salyut 4 research station since May 25.

The idea, on both sides, that space was a showplace for the relative merits of communism or capitalism has declined.

After Americans walked on the moon, the Soviets dropped the huge Red Square celebrations marking the return of cosmonauts from space.

The moon walk appeared on inside pages of the Soviet press, contained congratulations to the Americans and a comment from scientist Alexander Vinogradov that a man on the moon was "fulfillment of an ancient dream."

Soviet-American cooperation is now the key in the Soviet press and the Soyuz-Apollo is getting reams of advance publicity. It is the first time Soviet citizens have been informed of a launch in advance and will presumably be the first Soviet launch they will see live. And at the Star City installation where cosmonauts train, the Soviets proudly display a picture of astronaut Buzz Aldrin saluting an American flag on the moon. It is inscribed by

A Trio Of Pages On Joint Space Venture

confrontations on earth, the Soviet Union has drastically modified its earlier claims that Soviet space conquest proved the superiority of the Soviet system.

From the start of space exploration the Soviets denied there ever was a race. But boastful pronouncements of each new Soviet success left no doubt Moscow was deeply committed to enhancing its international prestige by space feats.

The Eisenhower administration also contended it was not in a competition. The late president said the first Sputnik didn't worry him and he called it "one small ball in the air."

In his inaugural address, President John F. Kennedy said to the Soviets: "Let us explore the stars together." But in a few weeks, on April 12, 1961, the Soviets put Yuri Gagarin into earth orbit and the first man in space returned to earth saying, "Now let other countries try to

Ambassadors To See Launches

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and his American counterpart in Moscow will share firsts when the U.S. Apollo spacecraft and Russia's Soyuz blast off Tuesday on a joint space mission. Dobrynin and his wife will fly here that day as guests of Dr. James Fletcher of the U.S. space agency, and the Soviet ambassador will become the first Russian government official to view an American space launch. In the Soviet Union, the Russian liftoff at the vast Baikonur Cosmodrome in central Russia will be witnessed by U.S. Ambassador Walter Stoessel and his wife.

U.S. SHUTTLE COMING UP

Space Is Russia's For 4 Years

By PAUL REGER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston
(AP) — Russia will likely dominate manned space travel for the next four years while America goes through a spacecraft model change. But by the 1980s, the United States should be the world's common carrier in space.

The Apollo-Soyuz Test Project (ASTP), the joint U.S.-Soviet mission set for launch July 15, is expected to be the last voyage of the Apollo spacecraft, the reliable vehicle that ferried men to the moon and back, and America's last manned space flight until at least 1979.

Russia, however, is expected to continue manned flights at the rate of several a year using the Soyuz, a simple earth orbital spacecraft, much smaller and less sophisticated than the Apollo. The Soyuz is the Soviet space workhorse, used to fly two-man crews to Salyut space stations.

American space officials say the Russians are building a massive space complex — three or four times larger than Cape Canaveral, Fla. — in a southern Soviet desert.

Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford, Apollo commander for the ASTP mission and one of the few foreigners to visit the Russian Baykonur Cosmodrome, said the Soviet space complex "makes Cape Canaveral look pretty small."

He said the complex still under construction includes a new city of 50,000 called Leningrad to support the space missions.

"They are not slowing down one bit in their space program," he said. "They told us they're going to continue to have several manned flights a year."

The American space agency is concentrating its effort and funds on development of the Space Shuttle, a reusable spacecraft.

Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center near Houston, said the Shuttle may turn America into a space transportation agency for the whole world.

Experts believe that once the shuttle is operational, American companies and foreign governments will pay freight charges to deliver payloads into earth orbit. In effect, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) would become the common carrier in space, just as trucks, railroads and ships are common carriers on earth.

Key to this new era in space is cost.

Currently, the cost of delivering one pound into space is several thousand dollars, largely because spacecraft are used only once and then discarded. This would be similar to jettisoning an airliner after every flight.

With the shuttle, the cost of putting a pound into space can be dropped to a few hundred dollars because the shuttle can be flown, refurbished and flown again, time after time.

The heart of the Shuttle system is the orbiter stage which resembles an airplane about the size of a DC-9 jetliner.

It will be launched into space by two rocket boosters. These rockets, along with the three main engines of the shuttle, will develop more than three million pounds of thrust.

The booster rockets are attached to the outside of the or-biter and will be jettisoned at about 27 miles in altitude. They will parachute into the ocean to be recovered and reused.

An external propellant tank, the largest element of the shuttle system, will feed the orbiters engines during the launch phase and is the only part of the system that is not reused.

The shuttle will carry a crew of up to 10. The pilot and copilot will do the actual flying, and the rest of the crew will perform the work of the mission. Time in space can range from seven to 30 days.

In its 15-by 80-foot cargo bay, the shuttle will be able to carry satellites or a science station. It will also have a manipulator arm equipped with television for handling the payload.

At the end of its mission, the orbiter will return to earth and land much like a conventional jetliner.

Experts believe a fleet of shuttles may make dozens of flights a year by the mid-1980s and open up new uses for space.

The spacecraft will be able to deliver satellites to orbit and recover them when they are in need of repair. Multimillion-dollar satellites, which become useless under current conditions after some mechanical or electrical failure, could be returned to service at a fraction of their cost.

Manufacturing in space could become a reality with the shuttle, some experts believe, and lead to significant advances in medicine, communications and manufactured materials.

For example, experts believe that electronic crystals manufactured in space at a purity not possible on earth could lead to such things as wrist television sets, hearing aids the size of a pinhead, or cardiac pacemakers the size of a nickel.

The first international payload for the shuttle is already under development. Spacelab is a scientific space station being developed by 10 European nations which will pay NASA to deliver the module

SPACE PATCH: Here's U.S. patch for Apollo-Soyuz project scheduled July 15. It shows U.S. and Soviet space vessels nearing linkage and carries names of U.S. astronauts and the word "Apollo" in Roman characters together with names of Soviet cosmonauts and the word "Soyuz" in Cyrillic characters. ## Charged In Fatal Fire

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An unemployed loner who had been through Portland's alcohol detoxification program 22 times has been charged with arson and eight counts of murder in connection with a fire in an 80-cent-a-night hotel.

John Joseph Newvine, 61, a resident of the seamy district near the Burnside Bridge, for about 20 years, was arrested early Tuesday about an hour after fire swept through the three-story Pomona Hotel. Eight men died and 26, including three firemen, were injured. Newvine was to be arraigned in Multnomah County District Court today.

Police said the attendant of a service station near the hotel identified Newvine as the man who had bought 50 cents worth of gasoline a short time earlier.

Fire investigators say the four-alarm fire apparently started when gasoline was sloshed and ignited on a second floor landing of the hotel.

Soviet Cosmonauts Will Be Traveling Economy Class

By PAUL REIER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Orbiting the earth in the Soviet Soyuz spacecraft is traveling strictly economy class.

The Soyuz, the Russian spacecraft which will link up with an American Apollo in space July 17, is a comparatively simple machine designed for a comparatively simple job — carrying men into earth orbit and back again.

The Apollo spacecraft, however, was designed to ferry men to the moon and back. As a result, it outclasses the Soyuz in size, weight, comfort and sophistication.

What the Soyuz can do, the Apollo can do better, more often, for a longer period of time, with more safety and with more men. And the Apollo can do things the Soyuz couldn't even attempt.

But Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford, the Apollo commander of the U.S. — Soviet joint mission, said the Soyuz has one big advantage over the Apollo.

"They can build it very cheaply, they can test it and check it out very cheaply," he said. "They can turn 'em out like hotcakes."

Astronaut Donald K. Slayton, another of the Apollo crewmen, said comparing Apollo and Soyuz is like "comparing apples and oranges."

"Soyuz was designed strictly for earth orbit," he said. "You ought to be comparing more like Gemini and Soyuz, not Apollo."

Gemini was America's second generation of spacecraft which made its last flight in 1968.

"The Soyuz is totally adequate to do the mission we've got programmed for it. It's a good earth-orbital machine. And Apollo is obviously overdesigned to do the kind of mission we're doing. We could do the same mission with a Gemini," said Slayton.

However, there are basic differences — other than the generation gap, that separate the Apollo and the Soyuz.

U.S. astronauts are the heart and brains of American spacecraft. With the help of computers on board and information from the ground, American spacemen tell their machines where and when to go and how fast. The man on board is in control.

The Apollo has an on-board computer that, instructed by the astronaut, can control and guide the spacecraft. The computer fires the Apollo rockets or thrusters. Or the astronaut can do the same job manually.

On the Soyuz, the guidance and control is done by an electronic "jokebox" which processes signals from the ground.

This jokebox also automatically controls systems such as electrical supply, atmosphere and communications when addressed by ground signals. On Apollo, there are switches, operated by the astronauts, that control such systems.

Cernan said the Soviet cosmonauts must go through the jokebox even for such mundane things as turning lights on or off.

The Soyuz shape closely resembles the head and mid-section of a flying ant. The oval-shaped head of the "ant" is the orbital module. The mid-section is the descent vehicle, which is attached to a third section called the instrument assembly module.

Wings of the flying ant are solar power panels, the main source of electricity for the craft.

Joined to the descent vehicle and accessible through a hatch is the orbital module. This compartment is used for scientific experiments and is the crew bedroom and dining room. On top of this compartment is the docking collar which will attach to the docking module carried by the Apollo craft.

APPROVE AMBULANCE

LELAND, Mich. (AP) — By a margin of almost 10 to 1, residents of Leelanau County's Glen Arbor Township decided Tuesday to spend one mill for a new ambulance and rescue vehicle. The vote was 170 to 10.

VOCATIONAL CENTER: Construction continues on $2.6 million Van Buren Intermediate school district vocational skills center in Lawrence. Building of 96,000 square feet will house vocational education classes for juniors and seniors in district's 11 high schools when completed in January, next year. It is located next to intermediate school district's $250,000 office building erected in 1970. Vocational skills center is being financed by federal funds and non-expiring three-mill property tax levy. (Aerial photo by Adolph Hann)

Van Buren May Save $600,000 On ADC

By DENNIS COGSWELL

Paw Paw Bureau

PAW PAW — Savings gained from a recently completed review of some 1,500 ADC cases in Van Buren county are expected to be about $600,000 annually.

The figure was contained in a summary report submitted to the county board of commissioners yesterday by Charles Higgins, Van Buren social services director. Higgins cautioned however that the estimate was only tentative, noting that some clients may still be restored to the welfare rolls.

According to the report, of 1,482 cases reviewed, 190 were cancelled — 43 for failing to comply with terms of the review, 28 voluntarily, and 121 for other reasons including ineligibility. Since the completion of the report, Higgins said, 23 cases have been restored, with most of those persons who voluntarily cancelled.

On a monthly basis, savings from cases where cancellation was made because of a client's failure to comply with terms of the review are $11,285, $5,068 for voluntary cancellations, and $33,86 for other cancellations.

Higgins added that budget changes were made in 164 cases which remained active resulting in an average monthly spending increase of $118.

The review was part of a state-wide corrective action program ordered to reduce the rate of errors in welfare cases. State officials have estimated the total savings will be $30 million, but Higgins was skeptical.

"I think somewhere along the line we'll have to look at the number of cases we'll eventually reopen," he said.

Higgins also announced that the Van Buren social services department had been chosen for a federal pilot project designed to increase the agency's effectiveness. Starting in September, the department will embark on a year-long session of in-depth staff training under People Projects, Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based outfit.

Higgins said that if the project is successful, it may later be adopted statewide.

In other areas, commissioners approved advancing the Van Buren commission on aging $1,395 toward its 1976 appropriation in order that it may switch the funding of its information and referral and outreach programs from one federal source to another.

The programs are currently funded under Title III of the Older Americans Act, but will be switched to funding contracted through the social services department, according to Jane Siekman, commission director. The $1,395 is needed, Miss Siekman said, until some $6,000 the commission plans to seek in local donations becomes available.

Eventually, the funding switch should make the commission eligible for more federal money, she said.

Board Chairman Walter Sticksels said he had received many calls asking what the county was doing to prosecute fathers who are behind in child support payments. He said he was not happy with the way the cases were being handled in Van Buren circuit court, but that his remarks should not be construed as telling Judge David Anderson, Jr. how to run the court.

Sticksels also announced that the jobs of 80 county employees funded under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) scheduled to expire July 1, had been extended to July 14; and that he was hopeful the program would be further extended.

Commissioners also passed a resolution which will funnel the spending of all future CETA funds through the county's consultium agreement with Cass county.

Commissioners refused to join in court action which would appeal a decision to allow the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad to abandon an unprofitable 20-mile spur between Paw Paw and Hartford. The county had joined in fighting the abandonment initially, but Commissioner Gerald Rendel said any appeal was a waste of money since the decision now appeared to be firm.

A decision designating an agency for county health insurance was postponed pending a presentation by the Michigan Association of Counties, which has an insurance plan. County Clerk Charles MacDonald said he was not happy with Blue Cross, the county's present carrier.

Twelve present members of the county mental health board were re-appointed. The terms of Robert Beum, Mary Jones, Rev. Theodore Neely, and Esther Warshawsky will run until the end of this year; those of Lorraine Klapp, Douglas MacKinder, Helen Grund, and Charles Long through 1976; and the terms of Mary Burkett, Dr. James Davis, Darrell Cross, and Phil Mitchell will expire in 1977.

GETS DEGREE: Deborah Rock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rock of Galien, recently graduated magna cum laude from Northern Michigan university's school of nursing with a bachelor of science degree. A 1971 graduate of Galien high school, she is now on the staff of Northwestern Memorial hospital, Chicago, Ill.

Officers re-elected include David Griffin, vice president and Donald Spencer, treasurer. Mrs. Jane White was elected secretary.

Bulldozers Comb Dunes For Youth

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich. (AP) — Bulldozers replaced most humans today in the continuing search for a 13-year-old Kalamazoo Boy Scout missing since Friday.

State Police said they were abandoning the search on foot for George Fuhrman in favor of scraping sand from the spot where he was seen last.

About 80 searchers combed the area south of Van Buren State Park on Tuesday for the boy.

Troopers said the youth's sandals and hatchet were found on a dune south of the State Park shortly after he disappeared.

Young Fuhrman, who was camping at the park with his grandparents, set out to cut firewood and vanished.

Digging through the dune is being done to see if it slid atop the boy somehow, troopers said. But they also are considering foul play.

Earlier, the boy's father said he believes he found his son's trail through the dune along with that of a "tall, heavy adult."

The father added, "as far as I'm concerned he's not there. And, if he is, we just haven't come across his grave yet."

Solid Waste Program Approved

Paw Paw Bureau

PAW PAW — Climaxing two years of study and preparation, the Van Buren county board of commissioners yesterday authorized the implementation of a countywide solid waste treatment program.

The system will consist of one central 96-acre landfill located off 22nd avenue in Arlington township and 10 transfer stations scattered throughout the county from where refuse will be taken to the main site.

The county will maintain ownership of the landfill and transfer stations, contracting the actual operation and maintenance out to individual companies. These contractors in turn will charge commercial waste haulers for the right to dump waste at the sites.

The initial capital outlay for equipping, acquiring, and improving sites is estimated at $620,000, according to a report by Johnson and Anderson, a Pontiac engineering firm retained by the county for the study. However, Paul Kaiser, county highway engineer-manager, who has spearheaded the project, estimated the cost may climb more toward $700,000 or $750,000.

The initial capital outlay would probably be financed by issuing bonds to be paid from contractor fee, Kaiser said. He estimated that about $60,000 a year over a 20-year period would be needed. Operating the system would cost from $250,000 to $300,000 annually, he said, and would be shared by each municipality. This would range from a low of $4,964 for Hamilton township to a high of $36,084 for South Haven city, according to report figures. The amount would be based on what a one mill property tax rate would produce in each.

Since cities like South Haven and Bangor already charge through taxes for waste collection, Kaiser said, the one mill equivalency might actually result in savings. The report noted that the system should help ease the financial burden on all county residents and local units.

In some instances, existing landfill sites will be retained for transfer points. Ten sites, five each of two different kinds are planned.

The first type, to be located in Bangor, Decatur, Keeler, Paw Paw, and Pine Grove townships, would be attended sites open two days a week.

The second type, to be located in Almena, Bloomingdale, Hartford, Porter, and South Haven townships, would include large trash compactors and be open from two to five days a week. They are primarily designed as drop-off points for commercial haulers.

Kaiser said garbage contractors have received the plan enthusiastically. For most costs should decrease, which in turn will mean they will charge less for the service, he commented.

City Star, for example, which hauls trash in South Haven, currently must truck the waste all the way to Hastings, Kaiser said.

In order to implement the plan, Kaiser said, legislation will be needed to insure that all solid waste generated within the county must be disposed there. All local units will also have to designate the county to handle their waste.

In general, more areas not presently served by door-to-door collection may be offered service because of the convenience of transfer stations, Kaiser noted. In locations presently served by a landfill costs would remain similar.

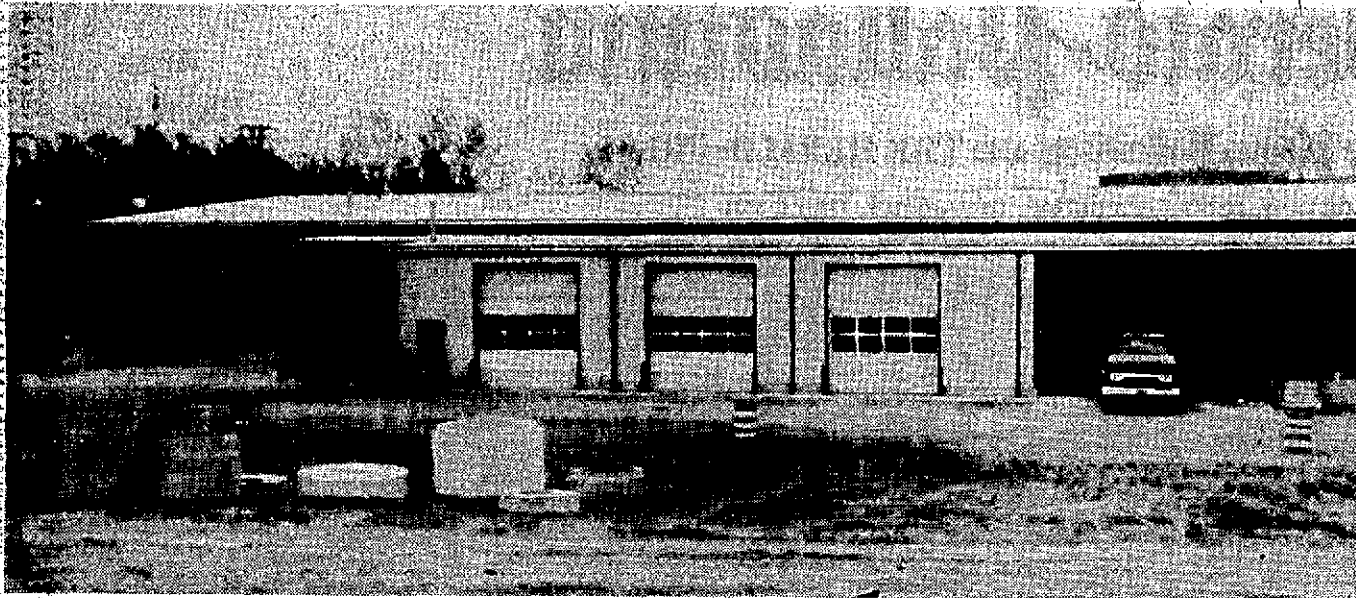

The program authorization passed on a voice vote after Commissioners Gerald Rendel and Boyd Estes had expressed reservations. Estes said the present waste collection system was working well and that work was only needed in a few problem areas. Rendel said he saw the project as another instance of the Department of Natural Resources telling the county what it had to do.

Kaiser reported last November that the DNR was threatening to close 10 county dump sites for not having licenses or failing to meet state standards.

BIKATHON LEADERS: Juel Ranum, chairman of Berrien Easter Seal Society's Bikathon '75, presented bicycles to cyclists who obtained pledges amounting to $987.82 of the $9,375.42 total. Income from the bikathon held May 17 will be used to maintain and expand services to handicapped children and adults in Berrien county. From left are Ranum, Danny Hedman, Sawyer, who led fund raisers with $325; Michele Wilkins, Coloma, who obtained $212.42 in pledges; and Vickie Gibson, Benton Harbor, who collected $209.40 in pledges. Not pictured is Atty. Gary C. Hosbein, St. Joseph, who collected $241 to win a bike. A total of 239 riders from 17 Berrien county communities participated.

SHORT MOVE: Schultz Roofing and Supply, a landmark for 38 years on Wayne street, St. Joseph, has moved to new home, a few feet from original structure. No change in address is necessary as new Wayne street will run in front of the new office, salesroom and warehouse.

ONLY LOCATION HAS BEEN CHANGED

Schultz Keeps Landmark Address

The $9 million Twin City twin bridges forced Schultz Roofing and Supply to move but they won't have to change their address. For 38 years Schultz Roofing was a landmark on Wayne street in St. Joseph between the Morrison channel and the St. Joseph river. Officially it was 221 Wayne street.

The right-of-way for the new bridges will pass over the former Schultz office, showroom and warehouse.

Now Schultz Roofing is located in a new warehouse just a few feet south of the former building. There is no need to change street numbers.

The new building formerly housed Voice of Music Corp. shipping operations. It was easily converted into a headquarters for Schultz Roofing operations with new offices, showrooms and warehouse facilities. Schultz Roofing has considerably expanded since the founder, Mike Schultz, now retired, began roofing operations in 1935.

Two years later he built the store and warehouse on Wayne street at Industrial avenue. Schultz Roofing for years applied roofing and sold materials. In 1980 the firm ended its application phase and concentrated on its materials' line.

The founder, Mike Schultz, was joined by two brothers, Lawrence and Henry. In 1982, Larry Schultz, a graduate of Michigan State and son of the founder, joined the business.

The new warehouse has approximately 25,000 square feet against the 15,000 square feet available in the original building.

The firm handles all types of asphalt shingles, roll roofing, materials for built-up roofs, and protective coatings and cement. Also Schultz has insulated siding, hand split cedar shakes, gutters and downspouts, soffits, wall paneling, bath and kitchen tile and ceilings.

Grand opening festivities are scheduled after Labor Day.

Chicagoan Injured In Berrien

A Chicago man was injured Tuesday, but not hospitalized, in a three-car accident on Sawyer road at California road, Weesaw township, Berrien sheriff's officers said.

Joseph Berk, 70, the driver of one of the cars, was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way in the 10:54 a.m. accident.

Drivers of the other vehicles, Martin E. Bell, 18, of route 2, Box 81, 60th street, Decatur, and Richard J. Wagner, 48, Sturgis, were not injured, officers said.

Superstars Still Great Over 40

ARNOLD PALMER
He, His Army March On

Life may not exactly begin at 40, as the saying goes, but for super-athletes Arnold Palmer, Pancho Gonzales and Willie Shoemaker, who are all over 40, things haven't slowed down a great deal either. "Arnie's Army" continues to grow in number. Although Gonzales is retired from professional competition, he still plays a key role in his sport as director of tennis at Caesars Palace. Willie "the Shoe" at 43 is the winningest jockey in history (last month he rode the winner in the Belmont Stakes). All three men could certainly afford to retire, but a unique motivation drives them on. Read why the will to win is as keen for them now as it was when they began their professional careers, in this week's Family Weekly, a regular Saturday supplement to the Herald-Palladium.

Grant Named To MGM Board

CULVER CITY (AP) — Veteran actor Cary Grant has been elected to the board of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc.

"Mr. Grant's outstanding achievements in the entertainment field and his reputation as an astute and knowledgeable businessman are well established and we believe he will make a very positive contribution as a member of our board," said Board President Frank E. Rosenfelt.

Lakeside Cemetery Has Lots Available

DECATUR — Joseph Miller, Decatur township supervisor, informed the township board last night that a 2 1/4-acre addition to the Lakeside cemetery has been platted and lots will be available for sale.

The addition, to be known as Lakeside annex 2, was purchased for $7,200 about two years ago from the Elwood Scott estate. The cemetery is located on Territorial road inside the Decatur village limits.

In other areas, Miller reported that no littering signs have been placed on township roads. Maximum penalty for littering is $400, he added.

Clerk Jerilee Klinkers was instructed to pay the Van Buren county road commission $10,000 from township funds for work that has already been done on the roads.

It was reported that the front of the townhall has been cleaned by the Wolf company of Benton Harbor for $324.

Nurses Sore Leg

Evolution Only One Side Of Beginning

By SHERA O'BRIEN
EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — In the 30 years since Clarence Darrow defended a teacher of evolution, time has played a cruel trick on the thousands who mocked and scorned the frightening idea.

Evolution has become so much a part of most schools' lesson plans that many pupils grow up never learning there is an alternate theory of how the earth began.

Creationism, the belief that God made the earth the way the Bible says, is not a household word.

Dr. John Moore, Michigan State University professor of natural science, and one of the country's leading creationists, has been struggling for more than 10 years to change all that.

"Creationists are much in the minority now," said Moore in a recent interview. "It's not a question of science versus religion but two different beliefs. Both are unashamedly belief systems."

Moore says that the evolutionist cannot scientifically prove his theory any more than the creationist can.

"How does the astronomer explain how the heavens came into existence?" Moore asks, rhetorically. "By a big bang — an explosion of very dense particles. That's one belief that cannot be tested."

"No one knows how the land masses came into existence. You can't explain it in natural terms."

So the scientists have come to depend on supernatural means — supra natural, Moore says, or above nature.

"The appearance or formation of mountains is not something we can observe," Moore says. "It is not natural, not repeating in the sense that since when did anyone see a mountain produced?"

"They (evolutionists) extrapolate into the past, where it's not open to testing. That's not part of modern day science."

Moore teaches a three-term course for freshmen at MSU that introduces them to the different theories of how the world began. Moore, who has a master's degree in botany from MSU and Ph.D. in education, considers himself a scientist.

"I am not denigrating the repeatables, the checkables," he says. "Man has been the beneficiary of scientific knowledge. To teach college, high school and even elementary students that's how it all came about is not good science. There's a responsibility to academic freedom."

His students react variously to his teaching, Moore says. He is getting favorable response from around the country, though, from teacher organizations interested in having him speak at conferences.

Moore emphasizes with teachers who present only the evolutionist point of view. He did the same for many years.

"I began to wake up in the late 1960s," Moore says. "I discovered that Charles Darwin had immense facts to support variations, but they were always in the same kind."

"There were variations in tortoises, variations in finches. I was a botanist. I know you can't mess around with corn and peas."

He started his own research, Moore says, and discovered evidence of species that had remained unchanged for millions of years. No evidence of evolution had touched them.

He found no evidence of one species changing into another. So, he says now, he cast his vote with the creator God, instead of the god of chance.

"I suggest to you they (evolutionists) are anthropomorphizing (attributing human characteristics to) nature," he says. "Who is Mother Nature? Does she have a Ph.D.?"

In 1963, Moore joined forces with others who believe God created the earth in the Biblical manner. Moore is now managing editor of the Creation Research Society Quarterly.

To be a voting member of the society, a person must have a graduate degree in science and subscribe to the four main beliefs of the group:

—The Bible is historically and scientifically true.

—God made all living things as described in Genesis.

—The Great Flood was an historical event.

—The account of Adam and Eve's fall is true, requiring all members to accept Jesus Christ as Savior.

WATERVLIET CITY COMMISSION

Sewage Dumping Plan Snubbed

WATERVLIET — Watervliet city commission last night voted to oppose a state highway department proposal to dump treated sewage effluent into Mill Creek from an I-94 rest area near here.

Commission action followed the reading of a public notice from the state water resources commission (WRC) which said the highway department was seeking WRC approval of the proposal.

City reaction came because the commission plans to construct a community recreation area, including swimming, along the creek near the rest area by next year.

City Administrator Donald

Muth said the eastbound rest area is located about a quarter mile east from where the city plans to build the recreation area.

City Commissioners Thomas Murphy and Albert Steffens pointed out that the creek is a designated trout stream and requested Muth to notify the Department of Natural Resources of the highway department's request as soon as possible.

Steffens added that the cities and townships of Watervliet and Coloma have just built a $12.6 million sewage treatment system at the order of the state and the state highway department should connect to the municipal system instead of carrying through plans to dump the treated sewage into the creek.

In other areas, the commission approved a lease agreement with Dennis Distributors of Flint for an ambulance service for the city-township ambulance service at $1,000 per month for 6 months.

After a state grant is approved for purchasing an ambulance, $850 of the monthly lease fee will be applied toward purchase of the ambulance now serving the two areas of Watervliet city and township.

The commission voted to have all change orders for the city's water improvement program approved by the city water and sewer committee before being presented to the entire commission.

The action followed criticism by Murphy of change orders undertaken, he said, by the city's engineering firm of Wightman and Associates without full commission approval.

Murphy said change orders that will not be accepted until approved by the commission include a $3,200 increase in the price of a new 150,000 gallon water tank, altering of water main sizes and omission of chain link fencing and safety closings for a new well house, all part of a $355,000 water improvement project for the city. Watervliet Mayor Robert Flaherty appointed two city residents, with commission approval, to two boards.

Appointed to fill the unexpired term of Arvid Frazier on the joint sewage board was Dick Woodruff. Al Kuiper was appointed as the third member of the Watervliet Ambulance board. Also serving on the ambulance board are Commissioners Steffens and William Fizzell.

The city's auditing firm of Kovian and company, St. Joseph reported on the city's annual audit, for the fiscal year that ended Feb. 28, which showed the city received $287,631 in the general fund and spent $255,833. According to the audit, the city also received $28,041 in federal revenue sharing funds and dispersed $27,036. In the sewer fund, revenue amounted to $116,635 while expenditures totaled $84,687.

Following the presentation, Flaherty told the commission that the auditors will be back later this month during a special meeting to outline recommendations for improving future audit reports and ways to reduce the overall audit preparation time and costs.

Flaherty recommended that the safety committee attempt to resolve the parking problem around Hay's park during the Watervliet Jaycees July 4 celebration.

Flaherty said cars were parked on both sides of the street surrounding the park and Baldwin field creating a hazard for emergency vehicles.

Flaherty added that he wants the Jaycees to come to a future commission meeting because he doesn't want the same carnival back next year that was set up in the park during the celebration this past week.

The mayor said one reason he was objecting to the carnival was that operators had refused to refund money to people buying tickets for one ride which broke down.

process as filler is placed in mold for an hour and then wrapped. Bottom row shows how the wrapped cigar is rounded out with a blade and the end is cut and glued. All that's needed now is an easy chair, an ash tray and a match. (AP Wirephoto)

Bill For Fire Truck Is Settled

WATERVLIET — Watervliet fire board and a fire truck manufacturing firm have reached a settlement on a bill stemming from delivery of a fire truck which was later rejected by the city and township.

Watervliet Mayor Robert Flaherty, clerk-treasurer of the fire board, said the amount settled on was $350.44.

The bill originally submitted by the Pierce Manufacturing company, Appleton, Wis., was for $1,343.

According to Flaherty, the $350.44 payment covers costs of repainting doors of the truck, lettering and return delivery.

Interest charges of $621.81, pump repair costs of $321, and a $50 dealer cost, all included in the original bill, were dropped in the settlement.

The firm had submitted the bill after the the city commission and township board voted against going through with the purchase.

Rejection stemmed from a controversy over the way in which the $40,000 truck had been ordered.

Flaherty said the fire board voted to pay the $350.44 bill during a meeting last week.

Ambulance Service Plans Open House

WATERVLIET — An open house will be held here Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. to show the public the recently started Watervliet Ambulance service. The open house will be held in the former city fire station, where the ambulance service is located. The city and township are currently operating the service, under a three-year contract with the Southwestern Michigan Ambulance service. Announcement of the open house was made by Albert Steffens, chairman of a joint city-township ambulance board overseeing the operation.

Citizen Gets Their Attention

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — A soldier stationed at nearby Ft. Sill got the full attention of the city council when he plopped down a dead 5½-foot copperhead snake for inspection.

Sgt. L.C. Mac Sellars brought the reptile to the council meeting Tuesday to dramatize his complaint about waist-high weeds growing on vacant lots near his east Lawton residence.

He said the snake was discovered when a 4-year-old neighbor ran over it with a tricycle Sunday.

Military Looking Better To Japanese

By MITSUO KIMURA
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The economic recession has resulted in a rush of recruits for Japan's self-defense forces, whose prestige was once so low that soldiers complained they couldn't find women willing to marry them.

With nearly one million Japanese unemployed in April — 260,000 more than one year earlier — the Defense Agency says it has decided to cut its recruitment goals this year to avoid taking in more soldiers than it can afford to pay.

The agency drew up its original target of 26,100 recruits for 1975 on the basis of past experience — it normally is unable to fill more than 96 per cent of its target. This makes a monthly average of less than 2,200 recruits, but one official said that since last year, the number of applicants run up to 5,000 a month on the average.

And normally, about 1,700 soldiers quit each month, the official said, but in May only 900 decided to quit. With unemployment continuing to run at nearly 2 per cent of the nation's 50 million-member labor force, officials say they expect a continued trend of fewer dropouts and more new applicants.

Thus, the agency has decided on a recruitment goal of 22,740 for this year to keep the land, sea and air self-defense forces near their present strength of 268,000 members.

Japan's post-war constitution bans military conscription.

After its losses in World War II, Japan took an anti-militaristic turn. Its constitution bans use of force as an instrument of national policy and some leftist groups, advocating a policy of unarmed neutrality, oppose the existence of the self-defense forces, which are banned from having offensive weaponry.

Aside from the issue of militarism, high school and college graduates looked to private business for jobs with higher pay and prestige and better life-long employment opportunities.

But amid economic uncertainties, the self-defense forces' starting monthly salary of $194 is looking better.

The amount is not impressive compared to the $297 to $300 monthly starting pay for white collar workers, but the soldiers can live free in barracks or, if married, in $10-to-$20-a-month government-owned apartments.

A private apartment with one bedroom, living room and kitchenette costs $125 to $200 a month in Tokyo.

The self-defense soldiers also receive annual bonuses equivalent to five months' salary and a lifetime government pension.

"It must be a good life there," said an official at Nippon Steel Corp. "We don't get stable bonuses — they fluctuate from year to year — and we don't get the pension." Pay is the reason the forces have to limit their recruiting now. One official said a one per cent increase in the number of soldiers boosts expenses by $6.7 million. The forces have a budget of about $4.7 billion this year.

The bright side of the picture for the forces is that they now can emphasize ability rather than numbers in recruiting soldiers.

Lawrence Village Names Wastewater Fund Agency

LAWRENCE — Lawrence village council last night named the Van Buren county road commission as the agency to apply for a federal grant to study wastewater disposal needs involving five area municipalities, including the village.

Council action came as a result of a meeting last month which included representatives from the five governmental units, county road officials, and representatives from the state department of natural resources.

Designating the road commission as the agency would provide a central reporting spot for the proposed study for Lawrence village and township, Hartford city and township, and Bangor township.

The study would determine what facilities are needed in the area, and the feasibility and cost of doing any work. After the study, the next two steps would be preparation of plans and specifications, and actual construction.

Cost of the study, as yet undetermined, would be 75 per cent federally funded, five per cent from the state, and the remaining 20 per cent apportioned on basis of how much it would cost to study each local unit's needs.

In other areas, the council, along with Lawrence township, agreed to appoint a five-member board of appeals in compliance with the state building code adopted last year. No one was named to the new board last night.

The council voted to seek a replacement for village police officer Rick Schlieter of Bangor who is resigning effective July 15.

The council approved charging owners of vacant lots where village workers have to mow.

Action was tabled on granting a cable television franchise to American Consolidated Properties of Kalamazoo after a representative of the firm failed to attend the meeting.

Bangor Township Selects Federal Grant Applicant

BANGOR — Van Buren county road commission was selected by the Bangor township board last night as the agency to apply for a federal grant to study wastewater treatment needs for a five-municipality area in the county. The study will cover Bangor township, Lawrence village and township, and Hartford city and township. The study would determine what sewer and wastewater facilities are needed, according to township officials. Cost of the study is undetermined, but 75 per cent would be federally funded and the remaining amount split among state sources and local units.

In other areas, the board approved a $5,256 payment as the township's share for equipment for a new fire truck that is expected to arrive later this month. Cost of the new truck and its equipment is being shared equally among the townships of Arlington, Columbia and Geneva and the city of Bangor.

Oronoko Man Heads US-31 Committee

Members of a US-31 Relocation advisory committee yesterday elected Robert Pagel of Oronoko township as chairman and agreed to continue monthly meetings.

The next session will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 12, immediately preceding the Berrien county planning commission meeting in room 101 of the Berrien county courthouse, St. Joseph.

Before deciding to hold monthly meetings, the US-31 advisory committee discussed limiting future meetings to specific issues and public information meetings. Lack of attendance was cited at the June meeting. About 20 people were present yesterday.

The organization was formed because of a federal regulation to keep citizens informed on plans to relocate US-31. Several alternate routes are being considered. A new US-31 freeway essentially would run from the south end of I-196 at I-94 in Benton township, southward to the Indiana line.

Berrien Planners Endorse State Land Use Control

By RALPH LUTZ
Staff Writer

The Berrien county planning commission voted yesterday to approve the concept of a proposed statewide land use act.

But, the planners also want the act regulated by the state legislature, and not placed into any existing state government agency.

Both viewpoints were adopted in a single resolution, to be sent to area legislators and the Berrien county board of commissioners.

It was reported that a bill, now in the House, would provide for a commission to administer a land use act, and the commission would be placed in the Department of Natural Resources.

Charles Eckenstahler, Berrien county planning director, said State Rep. Harry Gault, St. Joseph, opposes placing a land use act in the DNR.

Eckenstahler said the purpose of the act is to regulate land use on a statewide basis, but with the emphasis on rural areas, such as parts of the Upper Peninsula that do not have strict zoning ordinances.

Eckenstahler and several planners also commented that Berrien county could be dictated to by a land use commission, if such a commission were under the jurisdiction of the DNR, termed "a bureaucracy" by Eckenstahler. He noted that Berrien has moved forward in county planning and in zoning matters.

In other areas, Eckenstahler showed slides to indicate that both the proposed I-94 penetrator into St. Joseph and a cross-town route, along the west bank of the St. Joseph river in St. Joseph, would be needed to adequately handle area traffic by the year 2000. The presentation was similar to one the director made recently to the Twin Cities Area Chamber of Commerce.

Looking ahead to the 1975-76 fiscal year that began July 1, Eckenstahler listed some objectives of his department:

Disseminate information on a new county development plan; assist Hagar and Buchanan townships in drafting land use plans and revising zoning ordinances; assist Lincoln township in revising its planning ordinance; and assisting Coloma township in adopting a planning ordinance.

Other assistance will be in transportation plans for the Twin Cities area and Niles; and completion of a land use survey of under the shoreland management program.

The planning department also intends to catalogue all industrial sites in the county.

Purchase Of Gravel Approved

KENDALL — Pine Grove township board last night agreed to purchase 2,000 yards of gravel for $5,000 for township roads.

The Van Buren county road commission was to be notified by the township to place the gravel where needed.

In other road related items, the board agreed to store eight tons of chloride in the Kendall mill. The chemical will be available to township residents to spread around driveways to help eliminate dust.

The board took no action on a proposal to pave and widen 1.83 miles of 12th street from CR-653 to D avenue. The board was informed by the road commission that it would cost approximately $38,000 to improve the gravel road. Board members said township funds had not been set aside for the project this year.

In other areas, the board approved increasing from 2,500 to 6,500 watts, street lights in Kendall. The board decided to increase the lighting along CR-388 for safety reasons and because of increased traffic on the road.

Approval was given to Millard Root to subdivide 40 acres of land southwest of Kendall on 26th street to sell to individuals wanting to place mobile homes on the lots.

Mayor Candidate Backs Morrison

Walter Cooke, candidate for Benton Harbor mayor in the Aug. 5 primary election, has announced his endorsement of the revised city charter and support of City Manager Charles Morrison.

"I think the city charter is a workable mechanism and represents the vehicle for change in very positive directions," Cooke said. "I think that City Manager (Charles) Morrison will be able to effectively execute its spirit to the letter and that in time we will be able to realize very marked progress."

Morrison resigned June 8 and his contract runs for only 90 days. The proposed city charter will be up for vote in the primary election Aug. 5 and if approved by voters would not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1976.

Cooke, however, said he supports Morrison and would like to see him remain. "I think Morrison has done a good job," Cooke said. "I think he was just a scapegoat for other peoples' incompetencies."

Cooke also said he was satisfied that the police and firemen got what they wanted out of the new city charter, even though some compromises had to be made. The pension plan was trimmed, but the new charter insures the police and firemen that their benefits will be no less than guaranteed by the previous charter.

Cooke, of 1312 Union street, is a city charter commissioner and a licensed practical nurse at Mercy hospital.

He said he was presently working on the development of an Industrial City Recreational park located on parcels of land behind Superior Steel.

Cooke said as mayor he would advocate funds be made available to deserving business people to establish small businesses in the downtown Benton Harbor area. The funds would be in the form of loans, he said, with equitable terms and timetables for repayment.

It Might Have Been Fruit Cake

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN
Q: Chris Leachman is always winning awards and giving long, luscious acceptance speeches. Is she a bit nutty in real life too? — P.W., Richmond, Va.

A: Well, recently, a mushy cake was dropped on her head during a filming session and a couple of hours later she showed up at a party wearing the messy remainder of the cake as a hat. We don't know if it was a fruit cake or not.

UPPER CRUST: Why are they peevish at Warren Beatty on the Beverly Hills society circuit? Well, Hollywood's "Beautiful People" didn't love it when he turned down most of their party invitations; but, worse than that, he refused to give them prints of "Shampoo," to show in their private screening rooms. Warren told friends, "If they want to see 'Shampoo' let them go to a theater where it's playing."

BOOK OF THE WEEK: Marilyn Chambers, the porno star, is just back from Canada where she has been collaborating with Xavier Hollander, the celebrated hooker, on a new book, "Xaviera Meets Marilyn Chambers." Now Marilyn is off on a national tour to promote her own autobiography, titled "Marilyn Chambers: My Story."

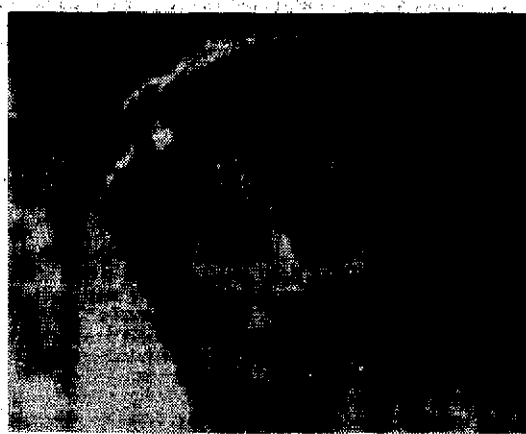

Marilyn brought her very own editor to Canada with her to work on the Chambers-Hollander book. Meanwhile the happy hooker is squeezing out one more book with her new ghost, Seattle writer Florence King, who is replacing Robin Moore, the man who did the hooker book.

Q: I guess Anthony Armstrong-Jones, Princess Margaret's photographer husband, is too independent to be a favorite of the Royal Family. But do they snub his children? — G.I., Bismarck, N.D.

A: British Royalty is really not much bothered by mavericks; they have dealt with plenty of them, and they are

Resistance Tactics Tie Up Probers

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The startling fact about the legislative investigation of the state Public Service Commission is that it is the first probe of its kind ever conducted in Michigan.

After five years and more than $500 million worth of rate increases for the state's biggest utilities, the legislature is getting around to asking the regulators some questions.

PSC Chairman William Rosenberg has reacted as though his staff is being hauled before a grand jury and interrogated about criminal conduct.

The fact is the questions are being asked by Rosenberg's critic, the attorney general, at the direction of a legislative committee whose members know little about utilities or the facts of regulatory life.

Utilities also don't like the idea of the legislative probe. Utility managers seldom have to answer to anyone but their stockholders and the PSC. Hugh Daly at Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. blasted the probe as unfair, which is ironic since Mich Con has a strong performance record financially and probably will not catch much heat from the committee.

Mich Con will be used in the inquiry as a benchmark which Consumers Power Co. gas division failed to live up to.

The blasts at the committee by Consumers Power and Detroit Edison executives were not as tough as Daly's, but then the executives at those utilities could not afford to make them as strong because the companies' performances have been less than sterling.

Despite frequent rate increases granted by the PSC, Edison and Consumers Power have come under intense criticism. Consumers Power's plant at Marysville has become a financial burden on the company's customers. The Palisades nuclear plant was pulled off the line for repairs shortly after its first day of operation. Edison plants have had troubles, too.

As earnings dropped at both utilities, the companies have been unable to attract investors.

Focus of most of the criticism from Rosenberg and the utilities is a second-term legislator, state Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Kalamazoo. The former political science instructor, chairman of the investigating panel, has bumbled his way into several political mistakes already, though the probe is scarcely underway.

Wolpe's first mistake was calling Asst. Atty. Gen. Hugh Anderson in to ask some of the questions.

Recorder's Reporter Sentenced

DETROIT (AP) — Recorder's Court reporter Francis L. Dixon has been sentenced to 24 months in jail for willfully attempting to evade federal income taxes. Asst. U.S. Atty. Loren Keenan said Tuesday.

U.S. District Court Judge James P. Churchill suspended 24 months of the sentence and ordered the woman to report to the U.S. marshal on July 17 to begin serving the remaining three-month term.

She pleaded no contest to a charge of attempting to evade income taxes in 1971 by failing to report income of nearly $27,000, Keenan said.

DOO DAH GANG'S ANTICS

Is It Art, Or Colossal Put-On?

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is it a new art form or a colossal put-on? A playboy's antic hobby or a publicity pitch for a show biz act?

The questions have been raised about the Doo Dah Gang, a wild kind of Living Theater that has been astonishing Los Angeles in the past year. The principal members of the cast:

Big Jim Valenti, a menacing figure in pin-stripe suit, Hornburg hat and round dark glasses, leader of the Doo Dah Gang.

Barney Weiss, head of the opposing mob, identifiable by the cigar in his teeth and carnation in his lapel.

Boo Boo O'Hare, longtime companion of Big Jim and now his bride, a frizzle-haired lovely with stage ambitions.

Tony Robozo, bodyguard to Big Jim, brother of the late Benny Robozo.

Charlie Ice, notorious assassin, real name: Francis Charles.

Plus supporting players Pete the Weasel, Toots Ganucci, Swede Halstrom, Biff O'Banion, etc.

These character have staged a number of encounters in the Los Angeles area, all of them involving gunshots (blanks) and blood (Max Factor).

On Memorial Day a year ago, Valenti arrived at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel for a meeting with Weiss to discuss joining forces to control the Los Angeles underworld.

The meeting was apparently unsuccessful. When Big Jim swatted his 1974 Cadillac in front of the hotel, shots rang out from a passing car.

A full-scale shootout ensued, leaving Benny Robozo mortally wounded in the gutter. The Doo Dah War was on.

Another gun duel broke out at Benny's funeral. Big Jim and Barney arranged a peace meeting at the Century Plaza Hotel in September.

The result: a raging battle with touring cars racing around the fountains of Century City. Another shootout at the Brown Derby in Hollywood. And Charlie Ice had the bad taste to introduce gunfire at the Beverly Hills Hotel wedding of Big Jim and Boo Boo.

Now Big Jim Valenti has moved in on Las Vegas, assuming control of the Flamingo Hotel where his bride is starring in a revue, "Doo Dah Daze."

The man behind all this nonsense (if that's what it is) is tall, lean Bob Graham, 34. He talks quite plainly about the philosophy behind the Doo Dah Gang.

"When I returned here from England a couple of years ago, I saw a very unhappy America. The country had gone through the terrible assassination and a war that had killed thousands of our best young men senselessly. I thought that people would welcome something that was absolute nonsense."

"Not that Big Jim is nonsense. He is absolutely serious in everything he does. And so are we in staging what I call our 'living canvases.' Everything is thoroughly researched and meticulously planned."

"The 'canvases' themselves cost from $12,000 to $15,000 apiece."

"For the shootout at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, we ran through it every night for 10 nights. We can't risk having anything go wrong, and we make all the arrangements with the police departments and the hotels."

"We have plain clothes officers in the crowd, just in case anyone gets too excited. If someone asks what is going on, they're told, 'Oh, they're just shooting a movie.' That satisfies them."

Graham is convinced that his living canvases are an art form. They stem, he said, from his own work as an artist in London.

"I started as an artist on canvases, then went to sculpture," said the son of a wealthy inventor. "But still, I felt the need for a greater creative challenge. So I began a series of early canvases in London."

"I had seen films on the BBC about fishermen in Japan and French grape growers, and I thought, 'We have people in America who are that unique. Why not show the British what Americans are really like?'"

He brought to London a New York city cab driver and his taxi, a Tuscaloosa dirt farmer, a San Pedro fisherman, a stockbroker, sponge fisherman, truck driver, etc. All were placed in their natural surroundings which were reproduced in a huge gallery.

"They were asked if they would mind sharing with Londoners what their lives were about," said Graham.

"I was told that the British were too reserved to participate. Not true. There was a wonderful exchange. My people accomplished more in a people-to-people relationship than 15 ambassadors have done, living in their stately houses."

Graham decided to attempt a larger canvas, and he settled on the gangster era of the mid-1920s "because it was a time of such wonderful nonsense and gangsters have become part of our folklore."

He came to Los Angeles and began plotting the capers, signing actors and businessmen at $175 a week to portray the mob figures.

With each new adventure attention from the media has grown, emboldening Graham to move Big Jim Valenti into Las Vegas. No matter that the town would like to forget its gangsterish past.

"Now that the big corporations have taken over the hotels, there's a new attitude," said Graham. "I liked the audacity of bringing gangsters to Las Vegas, and I wanted Big Jim to take over the Flamingo, which had been Ben (Bugsy) Siegel's hotel."

The Hilton management of the Flamingo went along with him, providing an unusual showroom — happily the one Siegel used for the hotel's opening.

Graham himself conceived and directed "Doo Dah Daze," which he insisted was authentic 1925, not a jazzed-up version of the Roaring Twenties. The show opened last Tuesday night.

Big Jim Valenti's advent to Las Vegas required living canvases, naturally. One was at McCarran Airport, where Valenti and his bride were scheduled to arrive in a Ford Trimotor. Suddenly Charlie Ice appeared in a Jenny biplane, machine guns blazing.

Trusty Benny Robozo, still out to revenge his brother's murder, aimed his pistol at the Jenny, which spurted smoke and disappeared into the desert.

Next Graham chartered a special train to take press and other guests to Boo Boo O'Hare's premiere.

"Great — a 300-mile canvas!" he said rapturously.

He denied that the Flamingo engagement meant the commercial payoff for his art form.

"People are saying, 'Ah-ha, here comes the reason for all this,'" he said. "Not true. I've got $600,000 in Valenti already. The Flamingo has a 700-seat room where the most profit I can make is $5,000 a week. That's hardly a commercial undertaking."

Where will it all lead? "Well, I'm only up to 1925. I can keep going to 1927 and stage Lindbergh's flight. Imagine — a 3,000-mile canvas!"

DOO DAH GANG: Big Jim Valenti (left), leader of Doo Dah Gang, arrives at Los Angeles Union Station with some gang members — Toots Ganucci (center) and bodyguard Tony Robozo. All were on their way by train to Las Vegas, Nev. Gang, a new art form or a colossal put-on; stages gang-like shootouts and has gone on-stage at Las Vegas. (AP Wirephoto)

Democrats To Make Fifth Try For Cloture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats will make a fifth try to shut off debate in the New Hampshire Senate election contest but their chances of success did not appear improved.

If the fifth attempt to invoke cloture fails today, another test is set for Thursday.

In Tuesday's fourth cloture vote, Democratic leaders mustered 57 votes, equal to their previous high in the three tests before the July 4 recess but three votes short of the required 60 votes.

NBA HAWKS DEALT SECOND MAJOR SETBACK

Thompson Decision Completes Nuggets' Coup

NEW YORK (AP) — All-American David Thompson has decided to sign with Denver of the American Basketball Association rather than Atlanta, dealing the Hawks and the National Basketball Association a second major setback in less than a month.

Atlanta, which held the NBA rights to Thompson, also lost Marvin "The Human Eraser" Webster to the Nuggets, who signed him for an estimated $1.2 million to $1.5 million.

The deal for Thompson is expected to cost Denver as much as $3 million spread over six years and would make Thompson the highest paid rookie in the history of pro sports.

In Denver, the Rocky Mountain News reported in its late editions that it had learned the former North Carolina State star signed a Denver contract Tuesday in New York.

The story by News columnist Woodrow Paige Jr. said the signing will be announced on Monday, after sale of the Nuggets franchise to a Colorado group is completed.

Confirmation of Thompson's decision came Tuesday from Atlanta Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons.

"Atlanta has been informed by Larry Fleisher, Thompson's agent, that Thompson has made a decision to play in the ABA with Denver," Fitzsimmons told The Associated Press.

Fleisher, reached in New York, said, "David called me at 11:30 this morning and told me he had decided to play for Denver."

Management of the Atlanta team, which reportedly has been struggling financially, was distraught at the loss of Thompson, a three-time All-American at North Carolina State whose super-leaping ability tabbed him for almost immediate pro success.

"We're extremely disappointed, but life goes on," said

Hawks President and General Manager Bud Serotean. "We tried everything possible. We just didn't get him." Serotean said the Atlanta offer was substantially the same as Denver's.

He said the Hawks now would concentrate their efforts on signing second-round choice Bill Willoughby, a 6-8, 210-pounder from Dwight Morrow High School in Englewood, N.J.

Meanwhile, Nuggets' Coach Larry Brown was understandbly delighted.

"I do think we signed the best two players coming out of college," Brown said. "The NBA felt that way and we felt that way, all along. For the league to get a kid of his ability... it's really a good thing."

Formal signing of the 6-foot-4 Thompson was expected within a week. Bob King, assistant general manager of the Nuggets, said he didn't expect Thompson to be "signing anything for four or five days."

Nuggets General Manager Carl Sheer was in New York to talk to Thompson and Fleisher, and to discuss other matters with ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, King said, and was returning to Denver Tuesday night.

One highly placed ABA source said: "We felt pretty sure of getting him (Thompson). We had indications as long as two weeks ago he would sign with Denver. If he does sign, it'll be just super for our league."

Coleman Races Past White Sox

Fast-Moving Shutout Runs Tiger Streak To Seven

DETROIT (AP) — Joe Coleman pitched as if he had to go to a fire.

But he was the one blazing.

He worked so uncharacteristically fast he didn't have time to get out of his groove and he hurled the Detroit Tigers to their seventh consecutive victory, a 3-0 win Tuesday night over the Chicago White Sox.

Only Coleman's energy bested him. The veteran righthander ran out of gas after eight innings and John Miller came on to make it exciting, loading the bases before striking out Jerry Hairston to end the game.

"Coleman just gave in," Tiger Manager Ralph Houk said. "He didn't think he could make it in the eighth. He said he couldn't go out again. He almost fainted on the bench. He was gasping for air."

"I give him credit for telling me he couldn't go on," Houk said, adding with a laugh, "I had two or three guys hanging over the dugout screaming at me for taking Coleman out."

The Tigers will try tonight to sweep their second straight series when they send Ray Bare, 3-5, to the mound against Jesse Jefferson, 1-3. Despite the surge, Detroit remains last in the East, 9½ games behind front-runner Boston.

Ron LeFlore's leadoff homer in the fourth inning was all the cushion Coleman needed to record only his fifth victory against 12 losses. It made Wilbur Wood the losingest pitcher in the American League at 6-13.

The game lasted just one hour and 46 minutes.

"It was just one of those games where I had everything going," Coleman said. Working fast is good if you can do it. It keeps the fielders on their toes. I was in a groove so I figured I might as well keep doing it. Yes, I'm going to keep trying to work fast.

It was Coleman who started Detroit's winning streak with his victory last Thursday over Baltimore. It's the longest string for the Tigers since an eight-game skid which ended

AUG. 1, 1973. "He didn't take as much time between pitches," Houk said. "It looked like it helped his rhythm. It's his best game by far this year."

It was Coleman's first shutout of the season, but leaves him with only three complete games in 18 starts. His best previous outing was a one-hitter May 6 against Milwaukee in which he gave up a two-run homer in the first inning.

Coleman, usually a slow, deliberate pitcher, has even been running from the dugout to the mound each inning the last two games.

"If I do that I'll get myself going," he said. Miller got the first two men out in the ninth. Then Pete Varney singled, and Ken Henderson and Bill Melton walked. The crowd's "boos" turned to cheers when Hairston struck out.

"Not once did I think John would let me score," Coleman said.

Healthy Mike Marshall 'Pains' Pirates

Cubs Handed Fourth Straight Loss On Kendall's Hit In 15th

From Associated Press
Mike Marshall on the mound for the Los Angeles Dodgers is a sight for sore eyes — not to mention sore ribs.

"Mike's healthy now, and when he's healthy he's one of the best," said Los Angeles Manager Walt Alston after his ace relief pitcher helped the Dodgers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0 Tuesday night.

Reformed Rolls
Manager Bert Jager went 4-for-4 with two triples, scored three times and also picked the pitching victory as Christian Reformed smashed Church of God 16-5 Tuesday night in a St. Joseph Church league softball game.

Neil Sharpe added 3-for-3 and also scored three times while Dave Kett belted a three-run homer. Wesner and Brewer smacked homers for the losers in the six-inning game.

The broad-shouldered righthander looked like the Marshall of old, checking the Pirates on one hit over three innings after taking over for injured Don Sutton in the seventh inning.

Marshall, last year's Cy Young winner, has been having a painful season this year due to a rib injury. But he threw with ease in batting practice for 20 minutes before putting the Pirates down and out.

Sutton, 13-8, led 3-0 on a two-hitter going into the seventh, when he was forced to leave the game.

Unearned runs in the third and fourth innings helped Los Angeles to a 2-0 lead off loser Dock Ellis, and Jim Wynn homered to left with two outs in the sixth.

In the other National League games, the San Diego Padres beat the Chicago Cubs 8-6 in 15 innings; the New York Mets stopped the Atlanta Braves 4-3; the Cincinnati Reds trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1; the Houston Astros turned back the Montreal Expos 5-1 and the San Francisco Giants downed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4.

Fred Kendall's two-run single in the 15th inning lifted San Diego over Chicago. With one out in the 15th, Don Hahn doubled off Tom Dettore, 2-2, and Dave Winfield was walked intentionally. The runners moved up on a grounder by Hector Torres before Kendall singled to left.

Joe McIntosh, 7-7, San Diego's sixth pitcher in the game, got the victory that snapped the Padres' three-game losing streak and handed the Cubs their fourth straight loss.

The Padres tied it 6-6 with two outs in the ninth on successive singles by Gene Locklear, Dick Sharon, John Grubb and Tito Fuentes.

Rick Monday's two-run homer in the third inning had helped the Cubs to a 6-4 lead.

Monday's eighth homer of the season came after Jose Cardenal had singled to lift the Cubs into a 3-0 lead. They added two more runs in the fifth on singles by pitcher Steve Stone, Cardenal and Andy Thornton. George Mitterwald's RBI single added another run in the eighth.

The Padres scored twice in the fourth on singles by Bobby Tolan, Willie McCovey, Winfield and a double by Torres. They added two more in the sixth on Tolan's third homer of the year and McCovey's 11th.

Dave Kingman's 15th home run of the season, a three-run blast in the sixth inning, powered New York over Atlanta. Wayne Garrett opened the game with his third homer of the year, giving the Mets 13 homers in their last eight games.

Gary Nolan notched his first victory in almost a month with relief help from Rawly Eastwick as red-hot Cincinnati edged Philadelphia, Nolan, 8-5, scattered six hits in 6 2/3 innings before departing in the seventh when the Phillies scored their run.

Dave Roberts fired a four-hitter and drove across two runs with two singles to lead Houston over Montreal.

Bobby Murcer belted a two-run homer and Von Joshua ripped three hits and scored two runs, helping San Francisco beat St. Louis despite Ron Fairly's grand slam homer. The Giants, scoring early at the expense of Cardinal right-hander Bob Gibson, 2-8, built a 5-0 lead before Fairly crashed the seventh bases-loaded homer of his career in the sixth inning.

Testimony Starts In Forbes Case

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Professional hockey and Boston Bruins center Dave Forbes carry the legal burden for all pro sports into the courtroom arena today.

Testimony is scheduled to begin today in the unprecedented legal action which finds a professional athlete facing criminal charges.

A jury of five women and seven men has been seated, and Hennepin County Atty. Gen. Gary Flakne planned to present the prosecution's opening remarks today following selection of two alternate jurors.

Forbes has been charged with aggravated assault with a dangerous weapon — his hockey stick. The 30-year-old Bruins center was indicted by a grand jury following an altercation with Henry Boucha, then with the Minnesota North Stars, during a National Hockey League game Jan. 4.

Boucha, who has now signed with the Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association, underwent surgery following the incident to repair a broken bone in the orbit of his right eye.

This is the first time a professional athlete has been charged with criminal conduct for his actions during an athletic event.

Conviction on the assault charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Pistons Get Rent Break

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Pistons may not win the National Basketball Association title this year, but, pending city council approval, they will save money on rent.

The Pistons per-game rent for their floor in city-owned Cobo Hall has been dropped from an average of $3,800 to $2,000 it was revealed Tuesday, assuring the team of at least one more season in downtown Detroit.

The Pistons had been lured by Olympia Stadium, home of the Detroit Red Wings. Olympia is several miles from the city's riverfront heart.

The new contract, however, calls for additional payments should the Pistons make more than $1.5 million. Last year the figure was $1.46 million.

"Sure it's a better deal than they had before," said William Finnin, who heads the Civic Center Department.

"When you have competition, what do you do? You sharpen your pencil."

Volpe Facing Old Problems Takes Job Of Upgrading Ladies Golf Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — When Ray Volpe takes over as commissioner of the Ladies Professional Golf Association on July 21, he will face problems that are older than some of the players.

"What they're complaining about now is not much different than when I started the tour," said Fred Corcoran, who founded the LPGA in 1948 with six players and a $3,500 tournament. "They wanted more tournaments, more money and they didn't want to socialize."

"Babe would," he said of Babe Zaharias. "She'd go anywhere. Babe had all the color. She was the Pele of golf. Without her, we wouldn't have had a tour."

Corcoran, who has stayed close to the LPGA scene since he gave up the tour in 1960, said he thought the women were doing very well but they need a

Win Streak At Five For Aggressive

From Associated Press

The yacht Aggressive II won two races Tuesday, stretching her winning streak to five as competition to see who will represent the U.S. in this year's Canada's Cup run enters its third day.

Aggressive beat Ricochet by just more than two seconds Tuesday, and then topped Dazy by even less in the day's second race to remain unbeaten in preliminary competition, which ends Friday.

Nike, an Ohio boat, lost to Notre Dame du lac by about five seconds but won her fourth race of the series by topping Dazy by less than three seconds.

In third place with a 3-2 record is Leading Edge, which split its two races Tuesday. World Two-Ton champion Ricochet won one and lost one as well on Tuesday, but is far from winning the series, held out of the Bayview Country Club.

However, boats will be judged on more than their record. A special committee also will look at crew ability, sportsmanship and boat speed before picking the cup defender. Cup races open Sept. 7.

Aggressive meets Notre Dame, Leading Edge and Nike today, with Nike also facing Leading Edge and Ricochet.

Locker Room Abuse Protested To Commissioner Writers Don't Lose Baseball Games

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It seems only fair, with baseball managers and players ganging up on writers and broadcasters, to repeat here an axiom often forgotten by the fun-and-games fraternity.

No writer ever hit a home run to win a game or made an error to lose one. No writer ever pitched a shutout or hit into a double play. So don't blame the journalists when things go bad. They're not responsible, any more than they can take the credit when things go well.

In recent weeks, Managers Ralph Houk, Billy Martin and Wes Westrum have taken out ball club frustrations on the writers.

Houk, who has traveled this trail before, got so excited that he allegedly manhandled one reporter, dragging him clear across the Detroit Tigers' lockerroom to the cheers of his players. When the newsmen filed a formal complaint, Houk wound up in a Baltimore courtroom, explaining the whole thing to a judge.

Martin barred a Dallas writer from the Texas Ranger dressing room, blaming him for instigating a clubhouse fight that involved a couple of his players.

Westrum evicted a St. Louis reporter, who did not demonstrate the proper solemnity when he entered the San Francisco Giants' dressing room after a loss to the Cardinals.

The Boston Red Sox, objecting to some printed criticism, tossed a writer out of their dressing room and a Minnesota team broadcaster got into an unpleasant scene with some Twins players.

The Associated Press Sports Editors Association and the Baseball Writers Association of America have formally protested the dressing room shenanigans to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

But really, this is nothing new. Ever since the first newspaper editor decided that his readers might enjoy an account about how the local athletes were doing each day, there has been a more or less adversarial relationship between the players and the press.

Managers are fiercely loyal to their players and when a team is going badly, one way out for the pilot is to look for a common enemy. What better target than those troublesome writers who come around asking all those questions after the games?

It seems time for the commissioner and the individual clubs to crack down and order a halt to the locker room carryings-on. A ball player or manager who can't act like an adult ought to be fined or perhaps even suspended. Let them take out their aggressions and frustrations on each other, not the media whose job it is to report their games.

Red-Hot Nicklaus British Favorite

CAIRNOSTIE, Scotland (AP) — One hundred and fifty of the world's top golfers teed off for the 104th British Open Championship today.

And 149 of them were praying that Britain's five-week drought would end, the rain would fall and Cairnoustie's iron-hard course would soften up.

The odd man out was Jack Nicklaus, the biggest hitter in the modern game. He has been burning up the 7,065-yard, par-72 course in practice and, over the past two days, has turned in a phenomenal 24-under-par 264 for four rounds.

He'd be more than happy if things stayed as are, with the fairways hard and the greens true — and his power game allowed its head.

After his earlier burst of big hitting, which included a couple of seven under par 65s, Nicklaus took things easier Tuesday and merely tried out a few practice holes.

"I'm a bit surprised to find a course this fast and with no rough," he said later. "But I've never yet seen a British Open when the weather conditions didn't play a big part in the scoring. We're getting to real Carnoustie weather now — with an east wind getting up.

I'd be surprised if Ben Hogan's 282 record (in 1953) gets broken — but there again, it depends on the weather.

"You might get 20 over — you might get 20 over."

Thirty American golfers were to tee off today starting at 2:30 a.m., EDT.

Nicklaus, scheduled to start at 9:45 a.m., was the man to beat in the chase for the $16,500 top prize. Twice a British Open winner — in 1966 and 1970 — and four times a runnerup, he was undeniably the hot favorite, rated by Britain's legal bookmakers at 7-2 to win a third.

But the weather forecast was for some rain, which would slow the course and leave things wide open for a field that included last year's champion, South African Gary Player, who won last time the Open was played here seven years ago; U.S. Open champion Lou Graham; 1973 British Open winner Tom Weiskopf; and Lee Trevino, who won the British Open in 1971-72.

American Tracksters Nip Poland

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The American men's and women's track teams celebrated their 189-172 upset victory over Poland today with sightseeing in Prague and planning sessions for next week's meet in Durham, N.C., with the West Germans and Africans.

This meet was more of a team effort than our loss to the Russians," U.S. men's coach Lee Calhoun of Yale University said of his squad's 113-102 victory in the two-day dual meet in Prague's Strahov Stadium.

"It's exciting to see girls from all over the United States

U.S. WINNER: Utah State's Mark Enyeart (3) crosses the finish line to win 800-meter race Tuesday at International Track and Field Meeting in Prague. Jozef Plachy of Czechoslovakia, left, placed second. Behind Enyeart is Tom McClean of Orange, N.J., to took third. (AP Wirephoto)

develop a team spirit during a close international competition," U.S. women's coach Jack Griffin of Fredericksburg, Md., said after his charges rallied to beat the Poles 76-70 Tuesday night.

The Americans also crushed the host Czechs in a simultaneous dual meet with a combined score of 213-148 in their first-ever dual meet.

The Poles had been eager to beat the Americans and avenge a close 1966 loss, and they were installed as premeet favorites following the overwhelming 87-point U.S. loss to the Soviets last week in Kiev.

But the Americans upset predictions by dominating the running events, winning every flat race but the men's 5,000 meters, and also posting some surprise victories and high placings in key field events.

Women's long jumper Kathy McMillan, a 17-year-old Raeford, N.C., high school student, won her event with the second longest leap ever by an American woman — 21 feet, 7 inches — just one-quarter inch off the U.S. record by Martha Watson at Minsk, U.S.S.R., July 24, 1973.

"I won on the last jump after the coach told me to give it all I had. We needed the points for the team victory," said an elated Miss McMillan, whose next goal is a victory in the July 1919 meet with the Germans and Pan Africans in her home state.

Griffin singled out the 2-2 slam by the U.S. women in the 200 meters, with Pam Jiles of New Orleans winning in 23.2 seconds, ahead of Rosalyn Bryant of Chicago.

Griffin also praised the 800-meter victory by Madeline Manning Jackson of Cleveland, who again overwhelmed top class Eastern European challengers with smooth running and tactical brilliance. She is making a comeback after quitting competition following her Olympic gold medal victory in 1968.

Calhoun, a 1956 Olympic gold medal hurdler, said Mark Enyeart's victory in the 800, a slam by Larry Brown and Charles Wells in the 200 and a crucial victory in the 1,600-meter relay propelled the men to their triumph over the Poles.

"Even though this is not our best team, they proved they are a sound team," Calhoun said, adding: "One third to one-half of the 35-man squad will be replaced by superior U.S. athletes for the Durham meet."

Packers, Hendricks Far Apart In Talks

All-Pro Eyeing Other Teams

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Coach Bart Starr says the Green Bay Packers and all-pro linebacker Ted Hendricks are "hundreds of thousands of dollars apart" in their decontracted contract talks.

Because of the gap between financial opinions, Starr said, there is nothing to be gained immediately from face-to-face talks which Hendricks' business agent has accused the Packers of avoiding.

Hendricks is free to negotiate with any National Football League team, having played out his contract option in the 1974 season in which he blocked seven kicks and intercepted five passes.

His agent, Miami businessman Tony Roberts, has said he has been talking with other NFL teams, the Packers no longer among them.

He also said he has talked with a World Football League club, and that Hendricks intended to make a decision within two weeks before teams open their summer training camps.

Roberts has accused Green Bay of refusing to talk personally about a contract, and says they have been negotiating by mail.

Hendricks reportedly earned $100,000 last year with Green Bay, representing a reported $77,000 raise over what Baltimore paid him in 1973.

Starr, in his first season as coach and general manager, addressed a news conference Monday during a Packer annual golf and tennis outing for sportswriters.

He complimented his assistant general manager, Bob Harlan, who has handled most contract talks.

"I have never been opposed to personal meetings with Ted Hendricks or Tony Roberts, but I think Bob has done a magnificent job and taken a great stance when he said he wouldn't sit down and negotiate when we were hundreds of thousands of dollars apart," Starr said.

He said the contract in question would be of long-term duration.

"That is what we are talking about," he said.

"We might as well set the record straight," Starr said of the money void. "We said that when we get more sensible toward one another, we will be happy to sit down and talk."

"We have tried to maintain steady contacts with Tony Roberts, but it has not been too effective," he said. "He has replied to media people, but not to us. The situation is pretty much as it was a week ago."

"Obviously we would be disappointed if we couldn't sign Ted Hendricks," he said. "He is one of the top football players in the game, probably the premier outside linebacker in the game."

Proposed Deer Bill Could Tie DNR Up In Red Tape

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — An Upper Peninsula legislator says he will introduce a bill that could tie state officials in red tape if they try to allow antlerless deer hunting.

Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, D-Negaunee, said Tuesday his amendment to the 1970 Environmental Protection Act would require the state Department of Natural Resources to file an environmental impact statement on any antlerless deer permit quota set for hunters.

Under the amendment, individuals, sports clubs or other groups could sue to stop the DNR from setting a quota until it holds public hearings and complies with all rules of the environmental act, Jacobetti said. The act provides, he noted, "for the protection of the air, water and other natural resources ... from pollution, impairment or destruction."

Many Upper Peninsula residents were incensed in the past when the state allowed hunters to kill does and fawns. The DNR claimed the limited kill was needed to thin herds

Braddock Finishes Third In Hang-Gliding Tourney

Braddock competed against 215 of the top glider enthusiasts from across the country.

Braddock, co-owner of The Midwest School of Hang Gliding, Bridgeport, finished with 255 points with the winner from San Diego, Calif., collecting 242. Points are awarded on time aloft, hitting the target and competition over the slalom course.

"I had the longest time, over two minutes, in the air in qualifying and led the competition going into the finals," noted Braddock. "But then Sunday the wind picked up for 20 minutes. The two guys who finished first and second took advantage of it and kept aloft longer in the finals. When I was ready to take off Sunday the wind had died down."

Braddock, 38, was using a new experimental glider for the first time. "It's designed to give you more time aloft," added Braddock. "You just don't go down as fast...it has to do with its design."

Laing, Felgner Far Behind Pace

STILLWATER, Okla. — Southwestern Michigan's two representatives appear doomed to a quick trip home after the second round of qualifying in the Western Junior golf tournament here today.

Both 17-year-old Jim Laing of Dowagiac and 18-year-old Brian Felgner of St. Joseph were far off the pace after the first round Tuesday at the Oklahoma State University course.

Laing finished the day 11 over par with a 40-41-81 while Felgner was six strokes further back with 42-43-87.

The leader going into today's play was 17-year-old Larry Rinker of Stuart, Fla. — a freshman-to-be at the University of Florida — who shot a three-under-par 35-32-67 over the 6,534-yard par 34-36-70 course.

Hot on his heels were two players who will enroll at Oklahoma State in the fall — Britton Harrison, 17, of Beaumont, Tex., and Jim Woodward, 18, of Oklahoma City.

Harrison shot a 34-34-68 while Woodward carded a 35-34-69 and shared third place with two other players — Rob Brewster of Orchard Lake, Mich., and Bill Unsell of Dallas. Brewster had a 33-36-69 and Unsell a 34-35-69.

A total of 33 players finished at 73 or better despite an electrical storm that caused play to be suspended for almost an hour and a half late in the afternoon.

The low '31 after today's play will join defending champion Win Fisher of Grosse Pointe, Mich., in the match play portion of the tournament, which will conclude with the championship finals Saturday morning.

Publinx Advances Big State Group

WAILUA, Hawaii (AP) — Two Hawaii players, including a hometown golfer who learned to play on the windy Wailua municipal course, led 64 qualifiers Tuesday in the 50th U.S. Golf Association Amateur Public Links Championship.

Seven Michigan golfers were among the qualifiers, with the best round coming from Peter Owens of Livonia, who shot a 147 on rounds of 75 and 72.

Allen Yamamoto, who paced Monday's qualifying round with a 69, fired a 75 Tuesday to share the lead at 144 with Davis Ishii, who was born and raised on Kaula Island where the Wailua course is located.

Ishii had a 72 in Tuesday's round.

Other Michigan golfers qualifying for today's match play rounds are Larry Roy, 79-72—151, Allen Thompson, 78-83—151, Reynold Gutz, 77-78—152, Bob Proben, 76-77—153, Keith Mohan, 76-77—151 and Thomas Proben, 80-75—155. The cutoff was 153.

Michigan golfers missing the cut were John Miranov, 78-87—165, and Rayne M. Martin, 82-78—160.

Mark Sollenberger of Tempe, Ariz., finished one stroke behind the two Hawaiians with a 73-73—145, and James McMurtrey, Danville, Calif., followed at 73-73—146.

Among the group at 147 was Chris Marzalek of Arlington Heights, Ill., with the day's best score of 69 after a 78 Monday. Also at 147 was Joe User, Durand, Wis.

Tiger Tracks

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Horton sounds like he doesn't want to play in the All-Star game, but don't be surprised if he does.

"I need the rest," Horton said Tuesday.

That's what a lot of ballplayers say, but the league frowns on out-and-out refusals. Players often complain of injuries to get out of playing in the annual classic, but Horton has played all season as a designated hitter, despite a still-ailing knee.

"My leg still isn't 100 percent," he said. "I'm not going to take a chance on going over there and having something happen. Anything could happen. It's not worth the risk."

However, Horton said in another conversation that being selected for the game "is an honor for you and your family" and that whether he plays "is left up to Mr. Campbell."

Whether Tiger General Manager Jim Campbell asks Horton to accept an invitation remains to be seen. First Horton must be chosen as one of the American League reserves by Oakland Manager Al Davis for the game Tuesday night in Milwaukee.

"The last three years at the All-Star break I thought I should have a starting job," Horton said. "If I was a guy like Reggie Jackson and could use my mouth I'd get more votes from the fans. But I'm not that way so maybe people don't notice what I do."

The fans vote for the starters in the All-Star game, excluding pitchers.

Horton leads the league in runs-batted-in with 69 and is among the leaders in home runs with 16.

Chicago's big sticks have been whittled down by Detroit pitching the last two games, but Manager Chuck Tanner isn't concerned.

"It's all in how you look at it," he said Tuesday night, after the White Sox fell to Joe Coleman and the Tigers 3-0. It was the seventh consecutive triumph for Detroit.

"Their pitching did it," Tanner said. "Our big men have come through. Everyone in our lineup is a big man. You don't blame anyone when you lose. I say blame it on their pitching — Coleman and Hiller tonight and the other guy (Tom Walker) last night."

Walker bested White Sox ace Jim Kaat 2-1 Monday.

"We didn't beat ourselves tonight," Tanner said. "Wilbur (Wood) pitched a winning ball game, just like Kaat did last night. When you give up only three runs that's a winning game. They should have won, but it's hard to win when the other guy gives up no runs."

Tiger Manager Ralph Houk denies the suggestion by TV broadcaster Tony Kubek that Detroit was stealing Milwaukee's signs during the Tigers' recent four-game sweep of the Brewers.

"I wish we were that smart," Houk said. "I don't know where in the world he'd get an idea like that unless maybe some of the Milwaukee players said we must have stolen their signs because we hit them so hard. That sometimes happens. Pitchers will use that as an excuse."

Fishermen Fined For Fish Foulup

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (AP) — An apparent misunderstanding about the names of fish has cost two U.S. fishermen almost $1,000 in fines.

Benny Cottrell of Britton, Mich., and Robert Wright of Parkersburg, W.Va., appeared Monday before Judge James Greco, charged with having more fish in their possession than allowed.

Each was charged with having 11 pike and 40 yellow pickerel. Ontario fishing regulations allow a maximum of six of each for licensed fishermen.

Cottrell told the court they had come to Canada with their sons. They obtained the necessary licenses and were supplied with a pamphlet published by the government covering fishing regulations.

The trouble developed when the men began catching yellow pickerel and did not know K. Both men said they knew that type of fish only as a walleye and were not aware they were called yellow pickerel in Canada.

Even tourist-camp operators called the fish walleye, they said, and when they checked the government-printed pamphlet for walleye and found no mention they assumed there was no limit.

While the tourist pamphlet referred to by the men was produced in court and showed no mention of walleye, prosecutor Doug Gatz produced an official copy of the fishing regulations specifying that yellow pickerel and walleye are the same.

The men were fined $50 for each type of fish plus $10 a fish over the limit — the minimum penalty allowed.

Boyce To Coach Kettering High

DETROIT (AP) — Former University of Detroit assistant basketball coach Jim Boyce has dropped back into public school competition and will coach Detroit Kettering High School next season.

Boyce replaces Ed Williams, ousted for allegedly using an ineligible player.

Boyce left U-D last year after disagreements with Coach Dick Vitale. Boyce also has coached at Northwestern High School.

Hockey Great Joins Ford In Golf Outing

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Hockey star Gordie Howe says he'll stand safely back when President Ford tees off in their game Saturday at the Traverse City Golf and Country Club.

Howe, who played the course Tuesday as a warmup, told reporters he'll join Ford, Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., and the president of the club in a four-some during the President's weekend trip to Northern Michigan.

"Somebody says stand behind him," Howe joked. "But I guess that's the way you can look at the whole thing in life — stand behind the President. It's not a bad slogan I guess and in golf it's doubly important."

Howe, formerly of the Detroit Red Wings and now president of the Houston Aeros in the World Hockey League, said he has known Ford for several years, with most of their association on the ski slopes at Boyne Mountain.

"I'm thrilled," he said of the pending golf game. "That's one of the reasons I'm in Traverse City today. I wanted to have a look at that golf course. I don't want to look silly because when you're nervous you feel bad enough. And we do get nervous."

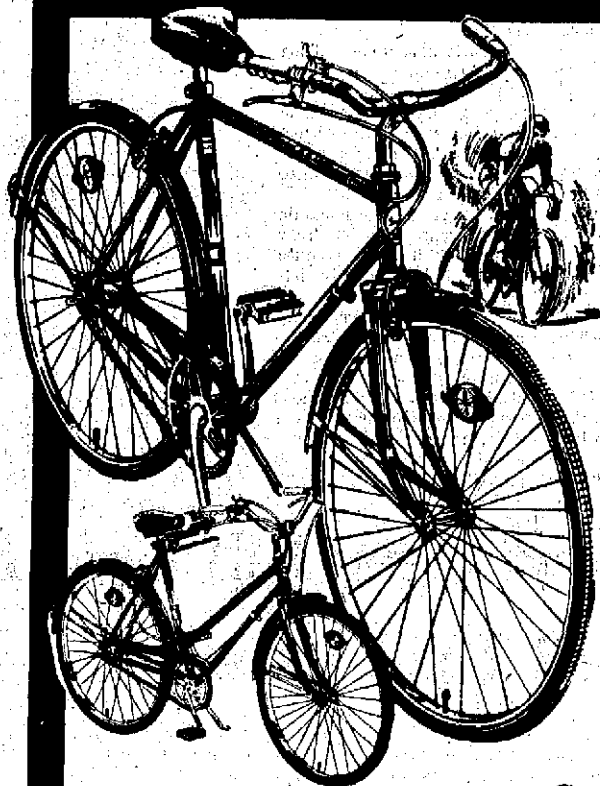

St. Joe Mack loses 10-6. Michigan City scored three times in the first inning and went on to sidetrack St. Joseph Mack 10-6 Tuesday night in a nonleague baseball game at Riverview Park.

St. Joe outthrew the Hoosiers 11-10 with Jeff Butler and Eddie Owsianka both collecting two singles. Tim Ward added three RBIs with a two-run single and a sacrifice fly.

Ron Hollis was the losing pitcher. Howard Eberly pitched the final inning of the nine-inning affair.

St. Joe Mack is now 3-11 overall.

Two years ago Congress and President Nixon cooperated to establish the Commission on the Organization of the Government for the Conduct of Foreign Policy, known as the Murphy Commission after its chairman, former Under Secretary of State Robert D. Murphy. The 12-member body, composed of eminent citizens drawn from Congress and the private sector, was notable from the outset for the absence of "heat-rackers." Its chairman, who spent most of his life in the Foreign Service, was famous for never ending up on the high end of a see-saw. "Bob," as one of his former colleagues put it, "always kept his shoes shined." Indeed, the "shiny" cable was considered something of an art form. In the words of the same critic, "You would finish three pages of 'Top Secret,' 'Nois' (the highest general classification, not for distribution) prose without ever finding a hard recommendation."

Well, there have been two years of hearings and discussions costing $2 million, and the Commission has produced a marshmallow. The closest it comes to a hard recommendation is to suggest that the President's National Security Adviser should not also be Secretary of State. I have been making this pitch in season and out ever since Henry Kissinger grabbed both jobs. But, the Commission knows that Kissinger is sensitive and goes out of his way to indicate that he is great and the proposed separation should await his departure from government.

In addition, there is a lot of playing with the Erector Set, upgrading liaison officers with the Pentagon, improving the status of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, taking the Voice of America out of the United States Information Agency, retaining the Central Intelligence Agency's Foreign Intelligence Agency, and the like. For this we spent $2 million? (A much better job was done at trivial expense several years ago by a disident group of Foreign Service Officers.) Indeed, the report got so bland that Mike Mansfield, the mild Montana monk, dissented with uncharacteristic violence, stating flatly that the whole exercise was a waste of the taxpayers' money.

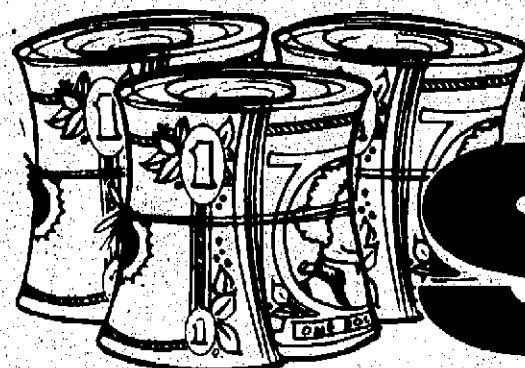

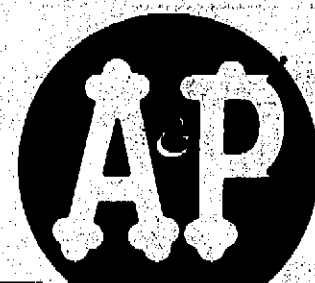

There is an optimistic side, however. The $2 million was injected into the gross national product and a number of staffers were kept off welfare—or perhaps on what might be called super-welfare. But in balance it's a shame because the conduct of foreign relations desperately needs sharp analysis. You can't reform the immensely clumsy apparatus we now have by playing games with tables of organization.

Take the eternal problem of coordination. Since every agency in Washington—with the possible exception of the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation—is in the foreign policy business, any State Department recommendation has to be "cleared" with other interested parties (Treasury, Defense, perhaps even the Fish and Wildlife Service). The result is that the Department's advice is invariably watered down by the paralysis of prudence. (In my files I have a memo with 28 clearances!) Defense has its private state department. International Security Affairs. How do you cut through this labyrinth?

During the Kennedy-Johnson years, Defense, dominated by the zeal of Secretary Robert McNamara, moved to counter state. If Secretary of State Dean Rusk had been a tiger, perhaps he could have held the line. But Rusk had a constitutional aversion to internal brawling and wound up essentially as personal adviser to President Johnson, who found his incisive intelligence invaluable. State, as a functioning coordinator of policy, languished in the shadows, which grew even darker with the ascension of Henry Kissinger and personalized diplomacy.

What this adds up to is that the role of State depends almost entirely on the character of the Secretary and his top subordinates. If powerful, intelligent persons hold the top jobs, have the President's trust, and spend their time running the store rather than wandering around the world, the Department will thrive. Where do I send my bill for $2 million?

Prepare meats according to the quality of the cut. Low-priced cuts are less tender than the higher-priced cuts and require long, slow cooking times.

Avoid waste. Meats cooked slowly at low temperatures have less waste as pan juices. Save trimmings and bones from meats to make stock for soups, gravies, casseroles.

Make use of leftovers. Store them in clear containers at the front of the refrigerator so that you remember to use them PROMPTLY.

Building Industry Recovery Leader

NEW YORK — (F.W. Dodge News) — While the rest of the economy is still probing for the bottom of the 1974-75 recession, "the construction industry is now showing the way to recovery," according to one of the nation's leading economists.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist of the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems company, today released his second scheduled update of the 1975 Dodge/Sweet's Construction Outlook. The forecast is issued by McGraw-Hill Information Systems company, an authority on the construction market widely known for its Dodge Reports on construction activity and Sweet's Catalog Files of building product information.

The six-quarter decline of the Dodge Index (a seasonally-adjusted measure of construction value) since 1967, as the 100 base) which began in the fall of 1973 finally ground to a halt in the opening quarter of 1975, Christie pointed out. Although the first three months of this year showed the lowest contracting rate in four years with the Dodge Index at 141, the second quarter posted a strong rebound "which still left the full-scale, across-the-board advance it will eventually become," said Christie. He believes that this strength will result in a construction year with the Dodge Index at 174, reflecting $96.1 billion in construction contract value.

For the rest of 1975 he expects a "labored recovery" of the housing market, and stable gains in heavy construction — utilities and public works. "The one weak spot for the next couple of quarters will be contracting for commercial and industrial building, where recovery is not expected until late in the year," said Christie. By 1976, as housing gains momentum and nonresidential building turns around, the two building cycles will both be in expanding phases, reinforcing rather than canceling one another as they have done in 1975, he explained. "There will be the potential for a much better than average gain in total construction next year," the Dodge economist said.

1975 Residential Building: Housing's advance has been limited to single-family building with the annual rate advancing from an eight-year low of 500,000 units in January to 575,000 units in May. Multifamily building, however, has failed to take hold with May's 250,000 unit rate of apartment contract scarcely higher than January's depressed 225,000.

1975 Nonbuilding Construction: Energy concerns have been a key stimulus to the "heavy end" of the construction business this year. Contracting for new power plants surged to a record $2 billion in the spring quarter. Christie expects utility contracting to taper off a bit in the second half, with "sizeable gains" in other types of nonbuilding construction during this period. Among these: Federal and state construction programs, the Trans-Alaska pipeline, the biggest part of the Trans-Alaska pipeline, about $2 billion in construction, will be concentrated in the summer months.

1975 Nonresidential Building: This sector is normally the last to recover from the effects of recession. Its behavior, however, has followed the same pattern as in the 1970 recession, with the decline in general business activity, the "volatile" commercial/industrial building market dropping sharply, while the more "stable" institutional half leveled off. This year, however, the energy crisis prompted a surge in construction of oil refineries, petrochemical plants and other energy-related facilities.

The resulting contradiction: during the first half of 1975, total industrial construction contract value increased by more than one-third at a time when industrial production was plummeting and excess capacity abounded. But the year as a whole, commercial and industrial building value will be down nearly 50 per cent, and institutional and nonresidential building will hold about even with last year; the decline of a total nonresidential segment will be just under 10 per cent.

NEWS OF MARKETS

Stocks Swing Upward

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, registering a favorable response to the pullback in short term interest rates late Tuesday.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up about a point, and gainers took a 3-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers noted that the market had begun to strengthen at mid-day Tuesday when open market money rates dropped back, reversing their recent upward trend.

Today's early prices included British petroleum, up 1/4 at 12; Baker Industries, up 1/2 at 27 1/2; Chase Manhattan, up 1/4 at 37 1/2; and Bristol Myers, unchanged at 67 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 3.29 to 967.79 after being down more than 6 points early in the session.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin on the NYSE in turnover of 18.99 million shares.

The Big Board's composite index was down 67 at 48.96.

TV Accuracy Hearing Gets Postponement

NEW YORK (AP) — A National News Council public hearing on the accuracy of a CBS Television News report on Syria has been postponed indefinitely while the network sends a crew to re-examine the issue.

The council, a private body which reviews reporting by national news organizations, announced that the hearing scheduled for today was deferred at the request of the complainant, the American Jewish Congress.

The AJC had claimed that the CBS report, a segment of the Feb. 16 "60 Minutes" program entitled "Israel's Toughest Enemy," portrayed the lot of Syrian Jews too favorably. It also contested a statement that Israel destroyed the Syrian village of Kuneitra on the Golan Heights with bulldozers and dynamite.

Representatives of CBS and the AJC met July 3, and the AJC subsequently said it would ask that the hearing be delayed.

SIMPLICITY PATTERN

Woman President Since January Quits

A woman named president of Simplicity Pattern Inc., N.Y., in January has resigned.

The firm is the parent firm of Simplicity Pattern company in Niles, an employer of 1,700 people.

Mrs. Mary Joan Glynn resigned because of "differences in management philosophy," according to an announcement by James J. Shapiro, chairman of the corporation's board of directors and its chief executive officer.

Mrs. Glynn had been vice president of Bloomingdale's department store in New York, N.Y., before assuming the presidency of Simplicity. She and her husband, Joseph, have four children.

Mrs. Glynn's appointment to the post, effective Jan. 1, was believed to have been a first for a major employer in Berrien county or possibly southwestern Michigan. The position in the past had been held by a man.

Mrs. Glynn is expected to announce her future plans shortly, according to Shapiro. No successor has been named yet.

The firm is a major producer and distributor of patterns for the nation and in foreign markets. It reported net earnings equal to 28 cents a share for the first quarter of 1975, compared to earnings of 27 cents a share for the same quarter last year.

POLICE ROUNDUP

Pair Of Break-In Suspects Arrested

Benton township police reported two men were arrested on charges of breaking and entering early today after a car loaded with about $1,000 in stereo equipment was found in the driveway of a home.

Arrested were Leon Hardy, 20, of 650 South Crystal avenue, and Donald Lee Abraham, 25, also of 650 South Crystal.

According to police, the owner of a home at 810 Adams street, Hurry Hickman, reported he had been tipped to a possible break in at his home. He was not home at the time, police said.

On answering the 1 a.m. call, police found a car in the yard of the home with about $1,000 in stereo equipment, identified as Hickman's, inside. Police believe their approach frightened off the thieves.

Police said the arrests were made after a registration check indicated the car was registered to Abraham.

Police said they narrowly missed capturing one or two thieves who broke into the August Pohl auto wrecking yard, just a short distance from police headquarters on Territorial road. A state police tracking dog was called in and was able to follow a trail only a short distance. Fifty cents in pennies were apparently all that was missing, police said.

An Eau Claire man told Berrien sheriff's deputies he was struck by one of two men who allegedly broke into a shop in back of his house early Tuesday.

Walter Rodriquez Rodriguez, 7020 Bailey road, told deputies he saw a light on in the shop and on investigating was jumped by a man who hit him in the face while the second man fled through a desk. Rodriguez was not seriously injured during the struggle and the two left the scene without taking anything, deputies said.

Several thefts were reported to Twin City area police Tuesday.

Vaughn Everhart, 2704 Lake Shore drive, told St. Joseph police a citizen's band radio and two golf clubs, all valued at nearly $300, were taken when his car was broken into early Tuesday morning.

Russell Minges, 2774 Maple lane, Hagar township, reported to Berrien sheriff's deputies the theft of hand and power tools, valued at $200, from his garage.

Rex Sheeley, 1073 Ogden avenue, told Benton Harbor police two large rugs, valued at $200, were stolen from an apartment he owns at 380 North Stevens street.

Pete Logalbo, 2433 North Fifth street, Niles, reported the theft of a trailer, valued at $180, from his boat docked at Whispering Willows marina, 2383 Niles avenue, to St. Joseph township police.

Four St. Joseph township youths were arrested by Benton township police late Tuesday night on marijuana and alcohol-related charges.

Police identified them as John E. McClelland, 17, of 2953 Dover drive; Patrick A. Mangold, 17, of 2349 South Cleveland avenue; and William B. Smith, 18, of 1088 Brann avenue; and a 16-year-old juvenile boy.

Police said McClelland, Mangold and the juvenile were charged with possession of marijuana and minor in possession of alcohol and Smith was charged with being drunk and disorderly.

They were arrested during a police check of the Rocky Gap park area off Rocky Gap road, shortly before midnight.

2. The reason they come is to harvest crops. When the crops are harvested, they are free to move on or return to their homes.

3. These migrants receive good wages when they work. Usually the husband and wife can work side by side, along with older children. (I cannot work beside my husband, nor can my husband take our children to work with him.)

4. Migrants pay no real estate tax or rent — their housing is provided free of charge by the farmer who employs them. Granted, these dwellings are not palaces, but if the family is working in the fields all day on a temporary basis, they don't want to spend a lot of time doing housework. They pay no utilities.

5. In many areas, day-care centers are provided for the children. (I have to pay someone to baby-sit for me!)

6. Many crops are spoiling in the fields because these migrants are receiving state aid in the form of food stamps, welfare and medical assistance and refuse to work.

7. No check is being made of their total family incomes, nor is any checking done to determine their financial status before they come into our state. We taxpayers are being asked to believe that these people were born yesterday with not a penny to their names. This is far from the truth.

My family could not go into another state, receive "welfare," go the entire summer months without buying that state's license plates and/or driver's license. In fact, we probably would be laughed at if we tried to apply for food stamps.

My solution to this ever-growing problem would be to require residency — after someone is here 90 days and cannot honestly find work, and are paying rent or buying a home, and intend to become residents of this state by buying vehicle licenses.

WHY NO RESULTS FROM DOG SHOW?

Editor,

I would like to know why you did not put a story in the paper about the dog show, or maybe a picture of the winning dogs? I have been looking everyday, and I am disappointed. I am sure that other people would have like to know about the dog show too.

Metro Arrests Trio In Break-In

Three Sawyer men were arrested in connection with burglaries at Toole's lounge and Gene's supermarket, both in Sawyer, according to Berrien Metro Crime Unit officers.

Arrested on charges of breaking and entering were Harry A. Shumaker, 18, Ronald E. Horner, 26, and Luther A. Baker, 21. All three are of Sawyer.

The arrests were made Monday and Tuesday during an investigation by Metro officers and state police from New Buffalo. The break-ins were discovered June 11. Police reported none of the items allegedly stolen were recovered with the arrests.

The loot was listed as food, lottery tickets, beverages and $75.80.

The three were arraigned in connection with the break-in at Toole's Monday and yesterday in Berrien Fifth District court. All demanded examinations on the felony charges. Horner and Baker were jailed in lieu of bonds of $1,000 and $5,000, respectively, while Shumaker was freed on $2,500 personal recognizance bond.

Berrien Court Sentences Five

Two persons were bound over to Circuit court, five demanded examinations and, five were sentenced Tuesday in Berrien Fifth District court.

Bound over to Circuit court were:

Vincent C. Guldry, 21, of 937 Hall, Benton township, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, a shotgun, against Esther Light June 26 in Benton Harbor. He remained jailed in lieu of $10,000 bail. Mrs. Light was not injured in the incident.

Bruce W. Zebell, 23, of 1282 South 13th street, Niles, charged with breaking and entering a Three Oaks store March 6. He was released on $1,500 personal recognizance bond.

Bloom'dale Officers Are Elected
Bloom'dale school district citizens' committee elected permanent officers at a meeting of the group last night at the Bloom'dale elementary school.

Elected president of the group was Lester Rawson of Lee township. Other officers elected were: Harold Fox, Bloom'dale, vice president; John Radney, Lee township, recording secretary; Jimmie James, Lee township, corresponding secretary; and Robert Vanflorn, Bloom'dale, treasurer.

In other areas, Wallace MacKinnon, a member of the group's steering committee, was selected to meet with new Bloom'dale school superintendent Donald Dragoo and members of the school board to discuss data concerning next year's school operating budget and the upcoming school millage election.

The board will hold a second millage election on Aug. 11. No amount has been set at this time. In June, voters defeated a request for 18.5 mills for school operations.

The group will also hold a social picnic for the new superintendent, Sunday, Aug. 3, at 2 p.m. at the Grand Junction elementary school.

Prison Escapee Bound For Trial

CASSOPOLIS, Mich. (AP) — A convicted kidnaper who fled from a Minnesota prison was bound over Tuesday for trial on two sex charges, officials said.

The Cass County prosecutor's office reported Dennis Darol Linehan, 34, is scheduled for arraignment in Circuit Court on July 18.

Linehan, arrested in Niles last Wednesday, is charged with second-degree criminal sexual conduct and attempted criminal sexual conduct, the prosecutor's office said. The arrest followed a nine-hour manhunt after a 12-year-old girl said Linehan tried to attack her in a wooded area, police said.

The charges on which Linehan had a district court preliminary examination Tuesday carry maximum penalties of 15 and 10 years respectively, officials reported.

Linehan walked away from the Minnesota State Prison's minimum security unit at Stillwater June 20 while serving a 40-year sentence for kidnapping, authorities said.

Court records show he was convicted in 1965 of kidnapping Barbara Iverson, 14, of suburban St. Paul. The girl's body was found in a shallow grave and police said she was strangled.

The walk-away occurred one week before Linehan was to be considered for parole. In 1972, Minnesota's parole board agreed to release him and let Linehan join his family in the state of Washington. But public outcry about parole at that time caused state officials to reverse their decision.

Assaulting Officer Puts Him In Jail

One man was sentenced to 90 days in jail yesterday in Berrien circuit court for assaulting a police officer last fall, and two other people got probationary terms for unrelated offenses.

Sentenced to 90 days in jail for assault and battery by Judge Chester J. Byrns was Duane E. Truax Jr., 22, of 902 Michigan street, Niles. The 90-day jail sentence is the maximum for assault and battery.

Truax was accused of assaulting Niles Patrolman Allan DeLee at the intersection of Main and Fifth streets in Niles on Oct. 19. Byrns placed Annie M. Taylor, 36, of 311 Fulton street, Buchanan, on two years probation, and levied fine and costs of $100, for attempting to carry a concealed weapon — a .32 caliber revolver — May 17 on M-130 in Benton township.

John Yakei, 18, of 904 Lions Park drive, St. Joseph, was also placed on two years probation by Byrns, and assessed fine and costs of $125, for attempted breaking and entering at Cass Dairy store, 558 Euclid avenue, Benton township, on April 17.

Bridgman Man May Be Missing

BRIDGMAN — City police reported they are seeking information on Lester Hall, 60, who has been reported missing for about three weeks.

Bridgman Police Chief Mike Pedde said foul play is not suspected as the cause of Hall's disappearance. Prior to his disappearance Hall resided at the Monogram hotel, Bridgman.

Mrs. June Mathieu, manager of the Monogram hotel, said most of Hall's belongings including his clothes still

Firemen Blame Child For Blaze

Benton Harbor firemen said a small child playing with matches was apparently the cause of a fire in a car parked in a lot in the 400 block of East Main street Tuesday.

The 1:30 p.m. fire was confined to the rear end area of a car owned by Lucille Johnson, 100 Smith court and the child, who firemen said was left in the car while the owner shopped, was not injured.

FCC Defers Payola Action Pending U.S. Indictments

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For the past two years, the Federal Communications Commission hasn't investigated allegations of "payola," the bribing of radio station employees to play certain records on the air. The reason: All such claims sent the FCC were and still are being passed on to the Justice Department for inclusion in the department's continuing national probe of payola, an investigation begun in the spring of 1973.

William Ray, chief of the FCC's complaints and compliance section, says the step was taken at the request of the Justice Department, which "asked us to pass along every complaint or piece of information we got."

He said no FCC investigation of payola allegations — which at most could lead to a broadcast license loss — has been made since the Justice request. The idea, he said, is to avoid jeopardizing federal criminal investigations — which could lead to jail sentences for some — now underway.

The word on what Ray calls the FCC's "hiatus" on payola investigations came in a phone interview in which he was asked what action the FCC may take in the wake of federal payola indictments returned last month.

The indictments charge that several record companies and their executives — none of the firms are major ones — made illegal payoffs to radio station employees in at least 16 cities.

Acceptance of payola isn't a federal crime, only the failure of the recipient to report it to the station's license-holder, Ray says.

The licensee is required by the FCC to "exercise reasonable diligence" in guarding

NEW TENNIS COURTS: Five members of Greater Eau Claire Recreation commission review plans of three lighted tennis courts now under construction at Eau Claire middle school on Fourth street. Cost of courts is expected to run $15,000 to $18,000, or about half of original $35,000 estimate, according to Richard Skibbe, second from right, treasurer of commission and Pipestone township. Skibbe said all contractors are donating some labor and materials, with money or labor being provided by Pipestone, Berrien and Sodus townships, Village of Eau Claire, and Eau Claire Lions and Jaycees. Property is being leased from school district for $1 per year for next 25 years. Pictured from left are Ken Brauer, Eau Claire community education director; Bruce Dustin, school board member; Ed Gustafson, senior citizen's representative; Skibbe; and Paul Bergan, president of commission and village trustee. RESALE SHOP: Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schroeder have opened a resale shop in large remodeled barn in back of their home at 4960 St. Joseph Avenue, Stevensville. The Schroeders will sell customers' valuables on consignment and feature new, used and antique furniture and accessories. They also maintain want list and a seller's list for items too large to display in the shop. Grand opening runs today through July 23. (Staff photo)

British Press Hits Repression In India

LONDON (AP) — The escalating repression of political dissent in Britain's most populous former colony drew stern reproach from the British press last week and an approving nod from the Soviet Union.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India "has now taken powers equivalent to those of a dictatorship," for motives which clearly have a lot to do with her personal attachment to political power," said The Financial Times. "What kind of land is India to become?" asked The Guardian. "One that Mahatma Gandhi would recognize? One that Pandit Nehru would embrace? ... The India that emerges from such an emergency ... will not be a recognizable democracy."

"An open society has become a closed one," said The Times of London. "Elected members of parliament ... are under detention without legal redress; the country now seems to be ruled by a small cabal." Almost 30 years of democracy has produced a large politically-conscious class in India, the Times continued, and this group "will be angered by what has happened."

The Observer, another Sunday paper, said Mrs. Gandhi faced two main challenges: "How to govern without increasingly resorting to coercion and the repression of the numerous minorities" and "how to achieve some slight improvement in the lives of India's suffering millions."

"There are two wrong ways of dealing with such huge challenges, and, sadly, she appears to be pursuing both," the paper continued. "The first is to clamp down on freedom of speech and the press ... And the second is to encourage xenophobia — in her case, of the United States, China and the Western press."

The New Delhi correspondent for the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda said the change was for the better.

"A characteristic feature of the situation in India after the imposition of the state of emergency is a clear turn of popular attention towards constructive activity," he wrote.

The emergency decree has resulted in "an invigoration of economic activity, a manifestation of a trend toward a drop both in wholesale and retail prices, the strengthening of discipline and organization in the work of the state machinery and in the sphere of production," said Pravda.

Five years ago: The federal government filed a statewide school desegregation suit against Mississippi.

One year ago: Former U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren died in Washington at age 83.

Thought for today: In character, in manner, in style, in all things, the supreme excellence is simplicity — Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, American poet, 1807-1882.

TODAY In History

LMC Plans Emergency Aid Class

Seventeen Benton Harbor and St. Joseph area doctors will participate in a 14-week Emergency Medical Technicians course at Lake Michigan college beginning July 21.
Coordinated by Lloyd Phillips, first aid instructor, the course will be taught from 6 to 8 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays. Designed primarily for firemen and emergency vehicle attendants, the class will be limited to 30 students.
The first two sessions will be held in room C-216 on the LMC Napier avenue campus. The remaining sessions will be conducted in room C-321.
Fee for the 5-credit-hour course will be $60 for LMC district residents. Known as an EMT-A course, its successful completion will lead to an emergency medical technician certificate.

When customers come looking for you, why play hard to get?

Some prospects may come looking in the Yellow Pages just for you. Maybe because a satisfied customer recommended you or because they saw your other advertising, or just passed by your place of business and liked what they saw.

Other prospects may be looking for anyone. They may be newcomers who don't know the area, or people with an emergency buying problem. Or maybe they're dissatisfied with people they're now doing business with. Whatever the reasons, don't keep your business a secret. Tell customers everything they need to know to make it easy to buy from you. Remember, when their fingers do the walking, it's a snap (for you, too!)
